If Prohibition Becomes a Fad in Washington It Will Help Dry Cause

ATTITUDE IS CHANGING

Visitors Respect Law More When They See It Observed in Capital

Washington — Nothing that Herbert Hoover, president-elect, drank his toast to Nicaragua in water, official Washington is again reminded that a "dry" administration is coming.

For several weeks there have been rumors that the folks in the official set were preparing to "go dry." Hostesses who have not hesitated heretofore to serve cocktail before dinner with the assumption, of course that it was all "pre-war," are beginning to omit the stimulants before dinner and say nothing about it.

If it ever becomes the fad to "go dry" here it will be the most important thing that has happened in the way of developing public sentiment behind the prohibition law. For it is an open secret that when people come here from various parts of the country and see officials serving intoxicants they go back home with the impression that either the spirit or the letter of the law is being violated at the very seat of government.

Herbert Hoover is reported to have told friends that ever since he became a public officer and the prohibition amendment came into effect, he has felt an obligation not merely to observe the law himself but not to accept the hospitality of others on this point.

CABINET ALTERS VIEW

The attitude of cabinet officers toward serving intoxicants at their home has gradually undergone a change. In the latter part of the Wilson administration and the first part of the Harding administration high officials thought nothing about the impression they gave in serving liquors to their guests. Then came the pressure on President Harding from various sources to set an example. He had always felt that so long as he did not serve liquors in the formal dining room it was his privilege to accept gifts from friends of pre-war beverages and that this might be consumed in the privacy of the white house apartments. But just before his western trip he decided even this was not desirable and in his famous Denver speech called on everybody to give up their stocks of liquors even though legally acquired.

Under the Coolidge administration the cabinet officers have uniformly observed the spirit as well as the letter of the law but beyond the cabinet circle the dry law has not had too many supporters, especially in functions attended by members of congress in the various homes where most of the entertaining is done. The idea that it would not be loyal to Hoover in view of his not being a prohibitionist was to be served and bootleggers patronized, is beginning to take hold and whether Mr. Hoover himself is responsible or whether it has come about naturally because of the implications of the last presidential campaign the fact is a change is coming and is noticeable already.

EMBASSIES MAY "CONFORM"

The embassies and legations, of course, are as popular as ever but the number of Americans who feel the compulsion to forebear to drink even when legally permitted to do so is increasing. While it may be early to take such a step it would not be surprising in a few years to see ambassadors and ministers "conforming to custom" in America by omitting the intoxicants except when entertaining their own countrymen. Some ambassadors have already indicated that they felt an obligation to "go dry" and avoid misconception of their importations and while the state department has done everything it could to avoid interference with the legislation and embassy traffic in household requirements, there is always a source of embarrassment in the privilege.

It will never be the American government's policy, of course, to ask that the ministers and ambassadors conform to custom so that anything they may do will be voluntary on their part as individuals or on the part of their respective governments.

OSHKOSH COUNCIL MAY VOTE MONEY FOR AIRMAIL

Oshkosh—(P)—The Oshkosh city council is considering a suggestion that it help meet expenses incurred by daily landings of the Fox River Valley airmail plane here starting Dec. 15 by appropriating $3,000 a year for that purpose. The appropriation would be made yearly over a five-year period.

Sign Papers For Bridge Over Mississippi River

Prairie du Chien—(P)—The construction of a bridge across the Mississippi river at this point, which has existed as a dream for 40 years, Thursday was near realization and the residents of McGregor and Marquette, Iowa, and Prairie du Chien assembled on the banks of the river to celebrate the signing of the contract that will begin operations.

The mayors of the three towns met to break ground for the bridge and residents of the towns arrived for the occasion in a spirit of rejoicing that the opportunity comes on Thanksgiving day.

Two spans, each 475 feet in length, will compose the million dollar steel and concrete bridge. Between the two spans is an island, five miles in length.

Harry E. Boyav of Memphis, Tenn., Wednesday afternoon signed the contract to finance the construction of the bridge. It is to be paid for by tolls and, in the future, the highway commission of Iowa and Wisconsin approve plans to make it state property, it will be sold. Mr. Boyav's engineer, J. Max Yingling of Austin, Texas, Thursday ordered construction machinery sent to Prairie du Chien and has promised to have a crew of men at work on the project by Friday.

The signing of the contract calling for the construction of the bridge is the climax of 40 years' effort on the part of the three towns. The Wisconsin Highway commission sought to enlist the aid of the Iowa legislature in constructing a free bridge two years ago but the proposal was turned down. The highway commission's plans, however, called for construction of a bridge a mile south of Prairie du Chien. The present plans will connect "Main street" with the Iowa towns.

Mid-summer automobile traffic will probably be turned over the new bridge, the contractor said. Federal highway 18 runs to the end of the bridge and two other federal highways across 18 near here, assuring a heavy traffic.

Incidentally, the signing of the contract sounded the death knell for the present means of transportation over the river. The two ferries that have plied the waters of the great stream for years must seek new grounds and a commercial enterprise that began in 1839 will have "finis" written across its ledgers.

66 MEN SEARCH FOR PONTIAC RESIDENT

Munsing, Mich.—(P)—Dense popular swamps, which stretch for miles near Creighton, Mich., were being beaten Thursday by a posse of 66 men, in their search for August Kleist, Jr., wealthy businessman of Pontiac, Mich., who has been missing since Nov. 15.

Stimulated by the offer of $4 a day and expenses, 50 men joined the hunt for Kleist, to augment the force of 12 constable officers and four intimate friends of the man who are furnishing the money for the hunt.

Kleist is the owner of a chain of theatres in Pontiac and a part owner of a bus line. His presence in this vicinity has not been explained. Something is believed to have happened to unsettle his mind, for he hiked about in thin clothing, which he wore when he came here from Florida, and he seemed unable to follow directions.

BREAKS U. S. DRY LAW, GIVEN LIFE SENTENCE

Flint, Mich.—(P)—Channie Tripp, 37, of Flint, Wednesday was sentenced to life imprisonment following conviction of a fourth violation of the prohibition law. The sentence was pronounced by Circuit Judge Fred W. Brennan under the new state criminal code which makes a life sentence mandatory for a fourth felony conviction.

Fred Palm of Lansing, was sentenced to a life term on conviction of possessing a pint of gin several months ago following three felony convictions.

"Other Woman" Arouses Ire Of Ex-Child Prodigy

New York—(P)—Winifred Sackville Stoner, author and lecturer and one-time child prodigy, caused the arrest Wednesday night of Robert Loeb, a stock exchange broker, on a charge of beating her in the lobby of the Sherry-Netherland hotel.

Loeb arraigned in the night court pleaded not guilty and was paroled in his own custody for a hearing Saturday on a charge of disorderly conduct.

The complaint, as made by Miss Stoner, alleges he struck her with his clenched fist, knocking her to the floor and then kicked her and threatened her life.

Miss Stoner, who is 26 years old, told Magistrate Brodsky that Loeb, who is 45 and is separated from his wife, had been a friend of hers for two years. Last Sunday, she said, she gave Loeb a bracelet valued at $3,000 to be repaired, and Wednesday night while in the lobby of the hotel she noticed Loeb with another woman, who was wearing her bracelet.

She said when she accosted the

URGE ANOTHER AIRMAIL LINE FOR APPLETON

Second Route, Asked of Government, Would Follow Lake Shore

Establishment of another airmail route through Appleton, starting in Milwaukee and passing along the lake shore through Stevens Point, Wisconsin Rapids, and Wausau to Minneapolis and St. Paul was recommended to the United States post-office department at a meeting of representatives of eight Wisconsin cities at Conway hotel Wednesday afternoon.

The meeting was called by Fred Felix Wettengel, acting postmaster, to discuss the advisability to establishing the new route and the proposal was enthusiastically received.

A committee was appointed to draft an appropriate resolution, prepare a summary of postal business and airport facilities in the cities to be served and to decide upon a plan of properly presenting the proposal to postal authorities in Washington. It is probable that cities served by the proposed route will be asked to send representatives to the capital to take the matter personally before postoffice officials.

The proposed airmail route will serve not only the cities named above but also a large number of tributary towns that will be listed on federal airmail maps as air mail cities. Neenah and Menasha, Kaukauna, Hortonville, New London and other nearby towns will be served by the Appleton airport; Manitowish and Two Rivers will cooperate and it is expected that a number of cities close to Sheboygan will be given "air-mail" privilege from the Sheboygan or Kohler airport.

All of the cities on the proposed route have airports; in fact only cities with landing facilities were considered.

There was considerable discussion whether the proposed route should be continued from Wausau to Duluth and Superior or whether it should go on to the Twin Cities but it was concluded that the other cities on the route would be better served by a connection with Minneapolis and St. Paul, especially in view of the fact that the government is considering another transcontinental route across northern United States with either St. Paul or Minneapolis as one of the stops.

Assurance was given by representatives of the various cities on the proposed route that sufficient air mail will be provided to make the route profitable. Letters from manufacturers promising to use the air mail are expressing a desire for it were read at the meeting.

Questionnaires are to be sent to civic organizations in the cities to determine definitely the demand for air mail facilities so accurate information can be placed before the post office department. These questionnaires will ascertain the population and postal business of the cities and their tributaries and also existing airport facilities.

ILLINOIS COLLEGIANS ARE OUT ON STRIKE

Eureka, Ill.—(P)—A strike vote of Eureka college students taken at a mass-meeting that ended early Wednesday resulted in a decision to walk out of classes until the resignation of Bert Wilson, college president, is accepted.

The action followed the refusal of the trustees to accept President Wilson's resignation proffered when under fire from students and alumni. The dismissal of certain professors popular with the students precipitated the outbreak when the president advised a general curtailment of expenses to remain within the institution's budget if the college is to survive. The board approved his policy. The removal of the professors followed.

PLAN DOUBLE AIR MAIL SCHEDULE TO PACIFIC

Salt Lake City—(P)—W. E. Boring, president of Boeing Air Transport, Inc., who is enroute to Chicago with other company officials to attend the National Aeronautical show, said here Wednesday that a double schedule for carrying air mail between Chicago and San Francisco is shown to be put into effect. Ten new planes will be put into use of the route in December he said.

At the same time — Walter T. Varney, president of the Varney Air line, announced plans for inaugurating within the next six months of day airplane passenger service to Portland, which would provide a 24-hour time saving to the Pacific northwest.

PROBE DEATH OF WOMAN THOUGHT POISON VICTIM

Stevens Point—(P)—Believed to be the victim of poisoning, Mrs. Jacob Pyter, 67, Portage-co. farm woman, is dead and investigation into the circumstances surrounding her death have been started by District Attorney Walter Murd.

Mrs. Pyterek swallowed some horse medicine, mistaking it for a drink of another kind, her husband said. When she became violently ill, he sent for quantity and gave her a few hours later she became critically ill and died.

Lay Cornerstone of New Gymnasium

Dr. Henry Merritt Wriston, president of Lawrence college, (with trowel) applied the last bit of mortar when the cornerstone of the new Alexander gymnasium was placed Tuesday afternoon. Seated behind Dr. Wriston and applauding his venture into masonry are W. H. Hatton, New London, trustee of the college; Ben Koepke of Appleton Construction Co. contractors erecting the building; Mayor Albert C. Rule, Dr. J. A. Holmes, E. A. Schmaltz and W. O. Thiede.

HERB PAYS THANKS ABOARD MARYLAND

Ship's Chaplain Conducts Services — Turkey Dinner Is Served

Aboard U. S. S. Maryland, Enroute to Guayaquil, Ecuador—(P)—The President-elect was moving southward Thursday on his way to Guayaquil, Ecuador, the first of half a dozen stops to be made in South America before he returns to the United States early in January.

Thanksgiving on board the Maryland was observed with holiday routine. The ship's chaplain conducted services on the quarter deck and at midday the crew was served a turkey dinner. Mr. Hoover and the officers planned to have their dinner in the evening.

Mr. Hoover's program in Costa Rica was extended until he was more than an hour late and the Maryland had increased her speed Thursday so that she might reach the Cruiser Cleveland, which will land the party at Guayaquil Saturday.

The president of Costa Rica accompanied Mr. Hoover from San Jose, the capital, to Punta Arenas, bidding him and Mrs. Hoover good bye at the dock. Costa Rica is the first country in which Mr. Hoover spent a full day, since landing in Honduras, Monday.

Members of the Hoover party, on learning of the wide distress caused by the recent floods in Costa Rica, made a voluntary contribution to the Red Cross. The flood damage was estimated at more than $1,000,000 but government officials said this would not interfere with the $11,000,000 road building program which is to be carried out during the next ten years.

"Shellbacks," those who have crossed the equator, took advantage of Thursday's holiday to make plans for the visit of King Neptune Friday. He will devote his attention to members of the officers and crew who have never crossed the equator.

King Real Chap, Avers His Former Gamekeeper

Delevan—(P)—Although the entire world has taken more than a passing interest in the illness of King George of England there is perhaps no one who has followed more anxiously than Harry Shephard, a farmer in Walworth-co., Mr. Shephard says up on the Englishman.

arch's Hillington estate and was head gamekeeper there five years. His father was head gamekeeper at Hillington 35 years and the son replaced him after the king retired the older Shephard on a pension.

"Kill'n' is just one of the places the king roamed," explained the former gamekeeper. "Sand'n'm (Sandringham) is the king's own place where he goes about with a walking stick just like you or me. He used to go and have tea with the old 'uns on the place two or three times a year."

"He'll shake hands with a man in overall. He's just like a common chap—a real democrat."

"He never turned out any employee even for being drunk all the time. If they get drunk so much they can't do their work, he pensions them."

"I went to see him at Sand'n'm when I was over last year and I just walked in on him there. I was walking about with him two or three days. He saw me when I was from here to that box car away and he came straight over."

"Well, Harry, 'm glad to see you again" and he took my hand and my arm with his two hands—like this. That makes a man feel good, you know."

MISSING GIRL GOES BACK TO HER HOME

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.—(P)—Josephine Gravelle, reported missing by her father and sought by the police because of her status as a witness in the Albert Amyotte murder case, returned to the Sault Wednesday, settling at rest fears of foul play.

The girl said she had merely gone visiting on Sugar Island for a few days. There had been fear that she had met with foul play from friends of the three men who were sent to prison for the slaying of Amyotte, a farmer, largely on her testimony.

HOLDS REGULAR JOB AND SERVES JAIL SENTENCE

Madison—(P)—Nelson Haggerty, is serving time in jail and holding down his regular job as well. Haggerty was sentenced by Circuit Judge A. C. Hoppman for reckless driving. The judge allowed him to have every Friday night of his 60-day sentence off to work in a bakery.

Viscount Cecil Thinks U. S. Will Agree to Enforcement of Sea Rules

London—(P)—Viscount Cecil of Chelwood, who was closely associated with Woodrow Wilson in the formation of the league of nations, favors parity of the United States navy with the British.

Speaking before the parliamentary committee of the league of nations, Viscount Cecil urged absolute mathematical equality in both tons and guns between the two nations. He said he thought disarmament was treated overmuch as a matter for experts and too little as a question of large politics.

America might desire to raise the question of freedom of the seas. His view was that acceptance of the principle of freedom of neutrals to trade with belligerents was subject to the old rules of blockade and would be advantageous to Great Britain rather than otherwise. Great Britain, he thought, ought to be prepared to come to terms on that point, provided America was prepared to join in enforcing those principles when they were accepted.

RECEIVED PEACE PRIZE

Viscount Cecil went to Paris in 1919 to assist in the formation of the league of nations and his close association with that organization was recognized in December, 1924, when he received the first annual award of the Woodrow Wilson peace prize of $25,000.

Viscount Cecil was a member of the British delegation to the three-power naval conference in Geneva in 1927 and shortly after the failure of that conference, he announced his resignation from his cabinet post, chancellor of the duchy of the duchy of Lancaster.

INSPECTOR ADMITS HE WAS CARELESS

Tells Probers He Failed to Lower Lifeboats as Required by Law

New York—(P)—Testimony of a veteran of the United States steamboat inspection service that he did not lower the lifeboats of the steamer Vestris, as required by law, when he inspected her prior to her last voyage, Thursday was part of the record of the federal investigation into the tragedy.

Edward Keane, whose routine report of the Vestris inspection stated that all requirements had been complied with, testified that he had tested the launching gear, but that because the Vestris was flanked by barges and lighters at the time, he did not lower the lifeboats to the water.

In the printed form of the Vestris inspection, Keane had written "yes" in reply to the question as to whether the boats had been lowered. Keane has been an inspector 17 years.

"I saw everything was in good condition," he said under questioning by United States Attorney Tuttle. "I was absolutely satisfied with what I had done. I knew I was not taking any chances."

He admitted that in not explaining all the facts in his report he had been guilty of carelessness.

FOREMAN TRAINING CONFERENCE WILL OPEN AT MARINETTE

First Class Will Be Held Next Monday, Coordinator Announces

The Fox River Valley Foreman Training conference classes will open Monday at Marinette and the first class here is to be held at the Appleton Coated Paper company on the following Wednesday, starting at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, according to H. G. Noyes, itinerant coordinator of the pulp and paper industry at Appleton vocational school. The enrollment in the valley is estimated at 325 men.

Classes at Eau Claire, Wausau, Stevens Point, Wisconsin Rapids and Mosinee ended last week, and 243 men were enrolled, according to Mr. Noyes, who with Arthur Bouffard, also of the local vocational school, directed the conference. The work is a part of the pulp and paper mill and vocational adult education program of the state, and is carried on under the direction of the local director of each school. Herb Heilig, director of the local school, is working on an extensive adult program for this city.

Classes will open at Green Bay next Tuesday and are to be conducted at the Northern Paper mills, Hoberg Paper company and the Port Howard Paper company. Local industrial plants cooperating are the Thimney Pulp and Paper company, Appleton Coated Paper company, Fox River Paper company, Interlake Pulp and Paper company.

Other plants in the valley which are to have classes are the Menasha Woodware company, Menasha; Hardwood Products company, Neenah; Kimberly-Clark company, Neenah; Combined Locks Paper company, Kaukauna; Thimney Pulp and Paper company, Kaukauna; M and M Bag company, Marinette; and the Victory Bag company, Marinette. M. W. Smith will act as instructor or leader for these classes, according to Mr. Noyes.

show YOU the difference

Here are two machines designed for the testing of cords used in tire building.

On each machine is a strand of SUPERTWIST cord and one of the usual standard cord.

On the machine in the background the ordinary cord is broken, while the SUPERTWIST cord is intact.

Yet both cords were of equal length and both were stretched the same distance.

On the machine in the foreground the ordinary cord is lax, while the SUPERTWIST cord is taut.

Both these cords were of the same length; both were equally stretched.

When the tension was relaxed, the SUPERTWIST cord sprang back to its original dimensions, recovering like a rubber band.

But the other cord had lost its spring, and now hangs slack and distended.

By this simple demonstration any one can see the difference between SUPERTWIST cord and ordinary cord.

This difference is important, as one reason for the great superiority of Goodyear Tires over ordinary tires.

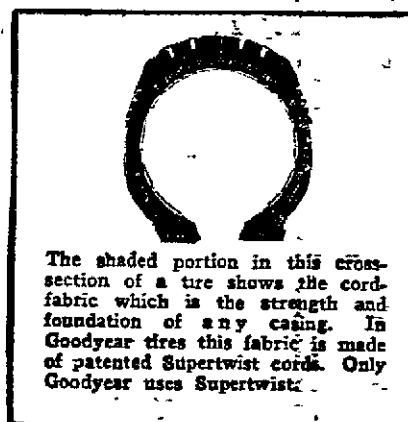

Built with SUPERTWIST cord, Goodyear Tires stretch and recover under the shocks of the road without damage.

Tires made of ordinary cord lack this ability and under road shock suffer precisely the results you see here.

SUPERTWIST cord is Goodyear-developed and Goodyear-patented, and is used only in Goodyear Tires.

Its elasticity—its durability has reduced blowouts and similar troubles to the vanishing point.

Come in at any time and ask us to make this interesting demonstration.

The shaded portion in this cross-section of a tire shows the cord-fabric which is the strength and foundation of any casing. In Goodyear tires this fabric is made of patented Supertwist cord. Only Goodyear uses Supertwist.

CAR SMASHES INTO
TRAIN AT CROSSING

Lyman Reilly, Oshkosh, Gerald Reilly, Winneconne, in Hospital

Neenah — Lyman Reilly of Oshkosh, and Gerald Reilly of Winneconne, are at Theda Clark hospital with bad cuts about their faces, head and hands, received at 4:30 Thursday morning when they drove their car into a Soo train which was standing across the Winneconne crossing. The car caught fire and was destroyed. Both men were thrown through the windshield. The men claimed they did not see the train until they struck it.

100 DEER TAGS ISSUED TO NEENAH HUNTERS

Neenah — A record has been broken here in the number of deer tags sold to hunters leaving the latter part of the week for the northern woods. The total so far in Neenah has reached the 100 mark, the largest ever known. Dealers and some hunters shot in northern Michigan have been passing through here for the last two weeks. The Wisconsin season opens Saturday and by that time the local contingent of hunters will be in the woods.

War Veteran's Memory Goes Back To More Than 100 Thanksgiving Days

Westernport, Md.—Burvige Coleman Trantum, the country's oldest Civil War veteran, is celebrating his 112th Thanksgiving today—and he says that each year Thanksgiving is better than it was before.

Born in Richmond, Va., in 1816, Trantum is still hearty and active. He is no sit-in-the-corner old man, content to doddle about the fireplace with his memories; he prefers to get out and see his friends. He counts them the chief of his Thanksgiving day blessings.

"For all the things in the world I'm thankful, but my friends are my greatest comforts," he says. "But I have so many blessings they are beyond recall."

He talks in stilted, old-fashioned phrases like that, does this old man who has lived a dozen years past the century mark. It's easy to understand why he does; after all, he was a middle-aged man when the Civil War broke out.

TODAY'S YOUNG PEOPLE
"Young people today aren't at all thankful," says Trantum. "They should be even more thankful for the bounties of the earth than an old fellow like I am, that's just waiting for a call to an unknown world."

He casts his mind far back when you ask him to tell about the first Thanksgiving he can remember. His mind delves back into the days before your grandfather was born; then he says:

"The first Thanksgiving I can recall wasn't such a pleasant one. I was at the home of old Martin Kneff near Harrisonburg, Va. Kneff had kidnapped me after my father and mother died. He was the meanest man on earth."

"I was only ten. Every day he took me out to the stable, tied me to a beam and whipped me with a switch until the blood would run down my legs. Then he would run salt and pepper in the wounds."

"The day before Thanksgiving I had some fun, though. I snared a hare and had him for dinner—not a rabbit, a hare. There used to be lots of them in Virginia and they were better than any old turkey gobbler ever expected to be."

AND GOT DRUNK, TOO!
"The Thanksgiving I recall most vividly was in 1865, just after the war. I took part in a rifle match and won nine turkeys, a quarter of beef and two geese. And I got drunk, besides."

He takes pleasure in telling about the old days. He has plenty to talk about; his story is like a romance of America's youth, colorful and bright with the tang of a day that has been dead for many decades.

When he was a tiny boy he went to a forest outside of Richmond with his father to haul some wood. The team bolted and their wagon overturned, pinning his father beneath it.

The little boy scurried home, a distance of a mile, to tell his mother, who was sick in bed. She ran all the way to the wreck, found her husband dead and collapsed. A few days later she, too, died.

There were no relatives and young Trantum became a homeless waif. In a few days Martin Kneff appro-riated him and gave him the kind of treatment Trantum has just described. A few months of this was all the boy could stand; so, one day, he stole a knife and revolver and ran away. He hid in a wheat field for three days, living on wheat that he plucked on the spot. Once Kneff, hunting for him, passed within a few feet of him without seeing him. Trantum says that if Kneff had found him he—Trantum—would have shot him. At that time, remember, he was nine years old.

Burvige Coleman Trantum

A few days later the boy met a teamster, told him his story and was invited to "come along and make your home with me." His new friend drove up to the Winchester Valley, where he and his wife gave the boy a good home.

It was only a few years, however, before the untamed and unschooled youngster ran away and took to wandering again.

CHILDREN 90 AND 18
For a long time he was a homeless wanderer. Eventually he settled down in Westernport, learned the carpenter's trade and at the age of 22 married. His first wife, during the years of their marriage, bore him 21 children. Where these children are now he does not know. The oldest, he says, is nearly 90 years old and the youngest—by his second wife—is 18.

He was 45 when the Civil War broke out. He enlisted in the Union army and served throughout the struggle. His most vivid recollection centers about July 1, 2 and 3, 1863, when his regiment took an active part in the battle of Gettysburg. General George Meade, who commanded the Union army in that engagement, is his greatest hero. He admits that Robert E. Lee was a capable general, but says only, "he had to be, to keep up with Meade."

MARRIES GIRL OF 17

After the war Trantum returned to Westernport and resumed his old occupation. Half a century ago his wife died and a few years later he married again—this time a girl of 17. Despite the disparity in their ages—he was over 70 at the time—they made a happy marriage. His wife, who is still living, bore him 12 children. He and she and three unmarried daughters make their home together here.

"I'm just waiting for the Lord to transplant me to another and better country," he says. But he is comfortable and happy in his extreme old age and he will not believe that this Thanksgiving can possibly be his last.

Speak right up . . . tell him you want a HOOVER

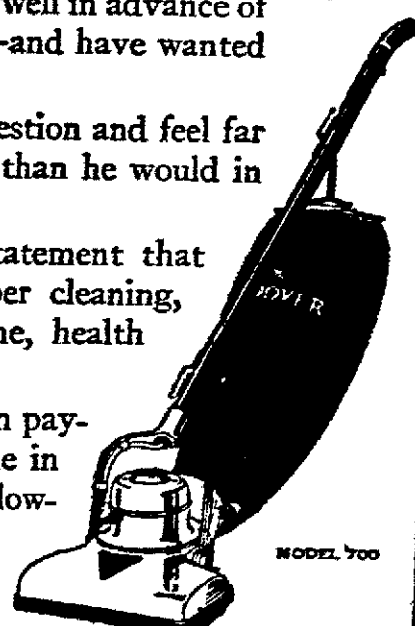

If you are still waiting for that Hoover you have hoped to get each Christmas for several years, the possibilities are that you haven't adopted the right method.

The average husband isn't an expert mind reader. Your predicament calls for bolder strategy. Tell him well in advance of the eventful day that you want a Hoover—and have wanted it for a long, long while.

He will be glad to have such a sane suggestion and feel far more competent to make such a purchase than he would in the selection of some feminine trinket.

He will see the wisdom, too, of your statement that The Hoover, with its faster, easier, deeper cleaning, will contribute immeasurably to your time, health and happiness.

The Hoover may be purchased for a down payment of only $6.25; the balance is payable in small monthly sums. There is a liberal allowance for old cleaners. And there are three fine models from which to choose, all with "Positive Agitation."

AMERICA IN THE WORLD COURT

Thinking men and women throughout the country will welcome the news from Washington that Mr. Coolidge is to make another effort to bring about American participation in the world court. We believe there is genuine regret that the United States is not in the court. There is, of course, an element of our people who have no opinion on the subject, or whose views are determined by politicians who have tried to prevent adherence, but this opinion does not reflect the real conscience and will of the nation. It is superficial and unreliable. With two or three exceptions, we know of no men high in American public life who have not given their unqualified indorsement to the world court. The moral and educational forces in the nation are for it.

The fact that the Permanent Court of International Justice has been man-handled by politics is now generally recognized, but it ought not longer to govern our course of action. If it had not been man-handled we would have gone into the court without attaching reservations, everyone of which could be dispensed with without endangering our interests. They were tacked on by politicians who like to make themselves out by some show of performance as especially American-minded. They are of the type that like to wave Old Glory and get the applause of the crowd. Some of them in addition were obstructionists who hoped that the reservations would either defeat ratification by the senate or acceptance by the other court signatories.

However, the reservations have been attached to ratification and undoubtedly will remain. The senate has too exalted a notion of its dignity and self-importance to change its attitude, but it may be that the reservations, some of which are undeniably ambiguous, can be satisfactorily explained to the large group of nations which has set up this tribunal for the furtherance of peaceful relations and the settlement of juridical controversies by a sane and sensible method.

Mr. Coolidge's administration will fall just short of that success to which he must naturally wish it to close if he has failed to bring about American adherence to the world court. There will be a reflection upon his record that implies inability to achieve what manifestly should have been achieved, nor will this shortcoming be wiped out by approval of the treaty of Paris renouncing war. The two measures have to do with widely separated fields of action. Both are necessary to the progress and strength of the peace movement.

Most persons had given up hope that Mr. Coolidge would attempt to revive the World court issue. Notice that he will do so is an agreeable surprise and it shows he is not insensible to one of the highest moral duties of his government in respect to foreign relations.

THANKSGIVING

Anybody who doesn't gather around the festive board on this day with family or friends, or friendly strangers, and eat turkey and pumpkin pie or whatever there is, with a good appetite and a grateful soul, isn't a good American.

Anybody who doesn't give thanks in his heart and show it in his face and voice lacks patriotism or religion or both.

Words of thankfulness may be lacking, but no matter. The spirit's the thing. What God has done for this country, and what this country has done for all of us, is beyond all power of expression.

PROMISE OF PEACE

Says David Lawrence, veteran political writer of Washington:

"We can't learn a great deal about the next ten years by a review of the last decade.

"The recuperative power of the world was under-estimated, as was the spirit of the people. For hatred is almost gone, a Germany able to pay has grown up, and the labor dollar today is better than it was in pre-war days."

Of these three notable developments, the most remarkable and reassuring is the passing of hatred. There cannot be much doubt about it, among those who look open-mindedly at what is going on in the world. It is perfectly clear that America does not hate Germany, and equally clear that Germany does not hate America. The relations of Britain and Germany are almost cordial. The greatest surprise of all is the approach to friendly tolerance and cooperation in Germany and France. They do not yet love each other, but they have come far from the bitter hatred of old.

How account for this? The world has really learned from the war. Perhaps that conflict quenched more enmities than friendships, leaving the nations ready for a new appraisal of each other. They still bicker and spat more or less, but no longer are they eager to fly at each other's throats.

The soldiers, even while fighting, learned that their enemies were human like themselves. They have come home and taught that to civilians. Therein lies the greatest promise of peace and good will, and hence of prosperity and happiness. If the promise of the last decade is fulfilled, we should go far in the next.

NABOBS

The fortune of Payne Whitney, New York capitalist who died last May, is found to be worth a little less than $200,000,000. Thomas Fortune Ryan, who died just the other day, left an estate estimated at $300,000,000 to $500,000,000. Here is a long jump from the days, still remembered, when a mere "millionaire" was a figure to gaze at on the street.

"Multimillionaires" are so plentiful now that they attract no attention. Even these two notables were almost lost in the mob of post-war nabobs. We have no adequate term for a man whose fortune runs into the hundreds of millions, and apparently nobody is sufficiently interested to coin one. The only word expressing great wealth that makes the public sit up and take notice is "billionaire." There seem to be at least two of these in America already. A generation from now our cities will be full of them. Possibly the woods, too.

THE ARMY OF DEER HUNTERS

Upwards of 50,000 deer hunters are expected to visit the upper peninsula of Michigan during the next few weeks. An extra ferry has been put into service at the Straits of Mackinac to serve them, and the wild land of the peninsula is being dotted with camps.

Yet, despite this influx of hunters, which was paralleled last year and the year before, deer are said to be more plentiful in upper Michigan this fall than in many years. Furthermore, state game wardens believe they will be even more plentiful next year.

The answer, of course, is the fact that Michigan is carrying forward a sane, far-sighted program of conservation. The woods are well patrolled by game wardens, regulations are rigidly enforced, and the wolves that used to decimate the wild herds are being exterminated. Sportsmen are satisfied, yet wild life is on the increase. Michigan can be proud of this achievement.

A WARNING ON CANCER

Another warning of the alarming increase in the prevalence of cancer, one of the most dreaded of all diseases, is given by Dr. Frederick Dugdale of Boston at the Chicago convention of the American Association for Medico-Physical Research.

"Millions in the United States are in early or potential cancerous states," he says. "Fully 5,000,000 others have the disease sufficiently advanced to be detected easily."

If cancer can be detected in time it can be avoided. The knife and the X-ray are extremely valuable, if applied in time. Delay is fatal. If you have any reason to suspect that you may have a cancerous condition, see a good doctor at once. Quacks and patent medicines will kill you. The cancer death rate can be reduced if cancer cases can be detected promptly. Do not take any chances.

POST-TONIC

The Remedy is Worse Than the Malady

A story is told of a certain English politician who thought everybody knew or ought to know him. One day he was walking through a field when a bull addressed him in an undertone and made for him with his head down.

The politician was a man of dignity and political power. But he ran. He ran surprisingly well and reached the fence before the bull. He clambered over, out of breath and dignity, and found the owner of the bull contemplating the operation.

"What do you mean, sir," asked the irate politician, "by having an infuriated animal like that roaming about the field?"

"Well, I suppose the bull has some right in the field," said the farmer.

"Right? Do you know who I am?" gasped the politician.

"I am the Right Honorable Sir—"

"Then why on earth didn't you tell the bull?" said the farmer.

Stop, look, and listen, then place your odds on the train.

"I've bought a new tin rattler for the baby."

"Why, John, it will be at least fifteen years before he will be able to drive a car."

He (far out in the country): "Gosh, Helen, the engine is stalling."

She: "Tee hee, so are you"

A newly-married couple may live with the bride's parents but they must have some place to keep the flivver.

"What's a hamlet, Daddy?"

"A place with only ten or twelve filling stations."

You may beat the train to the crossing a dozen times but if you fail to do so on the thirteenth attempt, you don't get any credit for past achievements or performances.

The man who says a woman has a vocabulary of only eight thousand words never crumpled a letter for one of them.

A wealthy lady was calling on a minister's wife, whom she found busy with the family mending. The wealthy lady remarked that she never did mending, but would gladly help sew on buttons. In the midst of her work she exclaimed, "Why, that's a button off my husband's coat!"

"Very likely," the minister's wife replied. "We found it in the collection box last Sunday."

"Boy, out in Gin Gulch we're so tough we eat baling wire for spaghetti."

"Notin'! Where I come from we know what it is, and eat it just the same."

"Tell them I died game," articulated the hunter who had been mistaken for a wild turkey by his companion.

A lawyer had a horse that always balked when he attempted to cross a certain bridge leading out of the village. No amount of whipping or urging would induce him to cross it, so he advertised him for sale. "To be sold for no other reason than that the owner would like to leave town."

She (to suitor): "Did you sacrifice your game and let that beat you as I suggested?"

Suitor: "I did, darling, and he said a fellow who played such wretched golf should never marry a daughter of his."

A fool manages to keep the fact from himself longer than he does anybody else.

LOOKING BACKWARD

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Thursday, Dec. 3, 1903

The Rebekah lodge initiated six new members at their meeting the previous night and elected the following officers, noble grand, Mrs. E. H. Hanchette; vice grand, Mrs. Sarah Beach; corresponding secretary, Mrs. John Carey; treasurer, Mrs. Hart.

The first real snow storm of the season occurred the previous day.

At Mesonic hall the previous night a luncheon shower was given in honor of Miss Ida Fischer, whose marriage to Ben Goodrich was to take place in the near future.

A party of fifteen local skat players went to Kaukauna the previous night and took part in a skat tournament. Prizes were won by Ernest Otto and Otto Zuehlke.

Mrs. W. H. Killen and Mrs. Frank Wright had issued invitations for a card party to be held at the home of the former the following Thursday afternoon.

The Eagles initiated six new members the previous night. At that time they had a membership of nearly 100.

Mrs. T. A. Burns left that morning for Green Bay where she was to visit friends.

A WHOLE YEAR OF PRODUCTIVE LIFE?

An Ohio reader sends this query: Some time ago I noticed that you approve of the two year hospital training course for nurses.

I contemplate entering a school where the course is two years. But the school is not an would not be qualified to pass the state board examination and get a certificate of registration.

A competent nurse, and if I have time for me to enter such a school. The school I refer to is a hospital. Will you kindly advise me as to what you think.

I have no knowledge of the nurse training school the correspondent mentions, and I can only repeat what I have said here more than once, namely, that in my judgment two years is plenty of time to make a competent nurse, and if I have occasion to summon a nurse in my own family I do not care whether she has had a two year course or a longer one.

Unfortunately, for the profession of nursing, the control of nurse training or education is largely in the hands of the highbrows and ladies and gentlemen who hold honorary positions on the board of managers in the large hospitals. These people are out to make the nurses pay, or at least to avoid a deficit so far as they can. It is their big idea, the third year in the nurse training course. That year is a grand thing for the big hospital that requires the services of many nurses. By holding the pupil over for a third year of it they get one full year of skilled nursing service for a song. Don't you see that?

As a calling, nursing is not so attractive today. Many of the girls are quietly bidding for applicants for the training schools, where a few years ago they were able to pick and choose. Young women, it seems are not rushing headlong into a nursing career these days; there are too many other opportunities open to them. Twenty or 30 years ago the probationer student nurse was selected after careful consideration of a large panel of applicants, and she was lucky to be chosen as a member of the new class. Today these same hospitals are competing with one another in the contest to get a sufficient number of girls to enter a training school, that is, of course, girls of good physical and moral constitution and intelligence.

The practicing nurse no longer receives the full measure of esteem from the public as it seems to me, that was formerly accorded to this noble profession. There is no more exalted calling in life for a woman than nursing, save only motherhood itself. I fear the public somehow forgets this.

In view of these drawbacks we must admire all the more the spirit and courage of the young woman who enters a nurse training school today with her eyes open. It is no more likely, she chooses a training school having the three year course (there are comparatively few good ones providing a two year course, and I can give no information about such training schools in any case), she deserves a lot of credit or perhaps we should say sympathy. Is she not paying a tremendous price for her equipment—a whole year of her productive life? When we remember how short is the professional life of the nurse, this third year robbery stands out in all its enormity.

Lists of recognized training schools may be obtained from the state board of nurse examiners, usually at the state capital. I regret I am not in a position to furnish this information.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
A Blue Star Letter

Already we have been greatly benefited by your personal health service in our paper, especially by your my poisoning antidote which I am sure saved my son from having his annual poison attack. (P. S. S., Indiana).

Answer—A gold star letter is one telling how my advice or teaching has actually saved a life. I have only one gold star letter on file—we published it here a year ago. A silver star letter tells how knowledge or instruction obtained through this column has prevented maiming or brought about treatment that corrects a deformity. I have accumulated 30 odd silver letters to date. A red star letter tells how my suggestions or advice or teachings have contributed to the welfare and happiness of a given household. I have quite a proud collection of red star letters. A blue star letter is one that hints my stuff is pretty good, but doesn't give complete data. I am not sure about the artistic harmony of these colors, but anyway there is lots of blue background or canvas to be touched up with red and silver, or who knows, maybe any other color or two of gold.

The...Not Carried by Books
I am a librarian in a large hospital. Many T. B. patients borrow books.

What I want to know is whether or not one can contract the germ by handling dozens of such books every day? (M. T. S.)

Answer—No. There is no evidence that tuberculosis has ever been spread by the agency of books or things handled by the patient or even by clothing the patient has worn. As a librarian you should know that T. B. means tubercle bacillus or bacilli, and the T. B. abbreviation for the patient comes to you in person for the books, you may be exposed to infection in the conversational spray.

Uriah Heep
I am a daily reader of your column and would like to know why my hands perspire so much. Is there anything to check it? (R. Z.)

Answer—I don't believe it can be anything you read in my column. One of the best local applications to control excessive sweating of the hands is an ointment containing 1 dram of solution of formaldehyde and 2 grains of menthol to the ounce of lanolin-petroleum base. This should be placed in a collapsible tube, and a piece the size of a pea rubbed into the palms once daily for a week or so, then later as needed. (Copyright John F. Dill Co.)

See-Sawing On Broadway

By Gilbert Swan

New York — A sinister note attaches to the prevalence of bodyguards in Manhattan.

A few years back a bodyguard was a joke — something connected with the eccentricities of Harry Thaw, for instance. But the vengeful hand of "the racket" has brought about the employment of scores of protectors. The bodyguards are recruited, for the most part, from prize fight or the gang world.

Time was when little differences of opinion were settled by an invitation to "come out in the street." Fists flew and blows fell. A fair fight was staged. But the gang methods brought a startling and thoroughly un-American outburst of cowardly attacks from the dark. Which reminds me that I have often wondered why those "hundred per cent Americans," who were so active a few years back, haven't done something about this new breed.

At any rate, any number of men now go about with a

WHIRLWIND

BY ELEANOR EARLY

THIS HAS HAPPENED
SYBIL THORNE, Boston society girl, has scandalized her little world by having a baby. Her husband, RICHARD EUSTIS, was a fascinating adventurer whom Sybil met on a trip to Havana. The marriage lasted two weeks. Sybil's baby is born the following spring in Boston and Sybil finds herself ostracized by people who decline to accept the story of her marriage.

Sybil's brother, TAD, is married to a girl named VALERIE, a selfish little creature, whose great redeeming trait is an overwhelming love for Sybil's baby. Valerie will not have a child herself.

DOLLY WESTON, one of Valerie's frivolous friends, finds Sybil and MABEL MOORE lunching together and tells them excitedly that she has dreadful news of Valerie.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXXIV

"I'll run along," offered Mabel tactfully. "I really mustn't keep that man waiting. Valerie isn't sick, is she, Mrs. Weston?"

"Oh, no—it's not that," Dolly floundered. "It's much worse than being sick."

"What is it Dolly?" asked Sybil. "Don't mind Mab."

"Oh, it's something dreadful! My dear, you could have knocked me over with a feather. I'm simply stricken. I'll never get over it as long as I live."

"Dolly! What is it?"

"Look! Mrs. Weston delved into a pocket of her big coat and extended a letter triumphantly. Her eyes were sparkling and her color burned high."

"I was on my way to Dot Faxon's bridge this afternoon, when THIS came. The letter carrier arrived just as I was leaving. And when I opened it—My dear! I'm speechless."

The handwriting was Valerie's and the post mark, New Haven.

"She's been visiting the Ramseys," explained Dolly, in an aside to Mabel.

Sybil was reading the letter silently.

"Well?" she queried and slipping the pages into the envelope, handed them back to Dolly.

Mrs. Weston flushed angrily.

"Well!" she retorted. "Anybody'd think you didn't care."

"I don't believe I do."

Sybil's voice was even.

"Valerie, you see, has such a flair for the dramatic. It would really be a shame to spoil her act. I believe, if you don't mind, I'll write her congratulations and tell her to run right along."

Dolly collapsed on the umbrella stand.

"Well, of all the hard-boiled women!" She turned appealingly to Mabel. "Did you ever hear of such a thing in all your life?"

Mabel was blandly indifferent.

"I don't know. What's it all about?"

Mrs. Weston shrugged. They were too much for her—Valerie's enigmatic sister-in-law and this blasé social worker.

"You're perfect idiots!" she told them shrilly.

With infuriating calm Mabel patted her on the back.

"Don't get excited, Mrs. Weston," she admonished, in her best professional manner. "What's the dirt, Sib?"

have a friend left. And that would kill Val. I know it would."

"Well," Sybil was grim. "That would help."

"Oh, Sib," Mabel interrupted eagerly, "after all, Val and Tad are about as compatible as a stray dog and an alley cat. You can't blame the poor little fool for clutching happiness. We all do that—according to our lights. And Val hasn't many lights—that's all."

"I'm not blaming her, am I?" interrupted Sybil hotly. "Let her go ahead. Live her own life—work out her own salvation. I'm not stopping her. Tad will be a darn sight better off."

"How about your mother?"

"She'll have to face it—that's all."

"But you haven't any right to make Tad's decisions for him. He wouldn't want to lose Valerie this way. It's an awful blow to a man's pride to have his wife walk out on him, and off with another man."

"Don't you worry about Tad," Dolly said to her subject.

"You could knock me over with a feather. I'm simply stricken. I'll never get over it. Poor Val—she's in with a fast crowd. That gang from New Haven. You knew it. Everybody does. It's Tad's fault, anyway. What can a man expect when he doesn't pay any attention to a girl? You know how it is, yourself."

She was conciliatory now.

"I always say we women ought to stick together. You may be sore with Val and all that. But you can't let her do this, Sib. If she and Tad can't hit it off, let them get a divorce. There's nothing wrong about that. But if Val elopes with this man, she might as well cut off her right hand."

"I know Val. She's a great little excitement eater, but she couldn't get along without people around—lots of them. She's no one-man model—not by a long shot. Social ostracism would hurt her worse than amputation."

"I tell you, Sib, it would be suicidal for Val to do this thing. She'd be eating her heart out in a month. You know who people would turn their backs on her—she wouldn't than a passing affair. You know. Like everybody has." Dolly colored. "I don't mean—" she stammered.

"Oh, that's all right," Sybil reassured her airily. "Don't worry, Dolly. We won't give you away."

"Well, of all the nerve!" Dolly sputtered wrathfully. "I'm a good sport and all that, but I certainly know where to draw the line. I never was so insulted in all my life. If you mean to insinuate, Sybil Thorne..."

"There, there, don't get excited, Dolly," put in Sybil soothingly. "I didn't mean to insinuate a thing. If you think this is my funeral, what was it you wanted me to do about it?"

"Well, I thought you might run down there. It's only three hours on an express. You could get the five o'clock, if you hurried."

"And then what? Grab Val from Darl's arms, and drag her home to Tad? Not a chance!"

"But you could reason with her, Sib. You know you could. She has the greatest respect for your judgment. And she's scared of you too. Sib. Get her to come home. Talk the thing over with Tad. Go through it respectfully. Think of your mother, Sib—and the baby."

Sybil laughed.

"As an emotional actress, Dolly, you're a bust. And your logic's rotten."

"But Sybil, I think Mrs. Weston's right," Mabel spoke with quiet conviction. "It's a tough thing to do, dear. But, for Tad's sake, I'd go through it if I were you. Why don't you let Jack and me drive you down tonight? Then you could go home and see the baby, and tell some plausible little story to explain the trip. We could come back tomorrow."

"Then why not tell Tad about it," demanded Sybil, "and let him handle Val?"

"Oh, don't tell Tad, Sib," Dolly Weston's stricken whisper was the prayer of a soul that had plunged its hell—a craven, frightened little soul.

"You don't know, Sib, what men are like when they hear things like that. If Tad knew that Val had planned to go away with this man—to live with him—he—why, Sib, he might kill them both!"

KEEP FOOD MURDERS IN BACK GROUND

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

The twenty-pound turkeys were strutting their stuff the other day near the corner where I was waiting for a bus. Some city holder skeptical of getting something extra good in turkey meat near Thanksgiving had bought these two fat birds in the country somewhere, no doubt, and had them parked on the vacant lot next to his house, awaiting the zero hour.

"A mother with her little boy also were waiting for the bus. Of course, the little chap was all worked up over the turkeys.

"Look, Mama. What are they?" "Turkeys!" answered Mama. "They're what you eat on Thanksgiving."

"Will we have turkey?" "Why, I hope so. Maybe Daddy will buy us one."

"Like those?" "No. A dressed one."

He wanted to know what "dressed" meant.

"Dead. Ready to eat," she told him. "Will these be dead?"

"Yes."

"When?" "Next week. On Thanksgiving."

"How? How will they be dead, Mama?"

"They'll have their heads cut off," she answered patiently. "Someone will cut their heads off and take off their feathers and cook them."

The little boy stared and stared. "I don't like turkey. Tell Daddy not to bring a turkey," he said suddenly.

"His mother didn't quite understand. 'You would if you tasted it. It's very good. Don't you remember? Last Christmas we had turkey.'"

"The little boy didn't answer. He was thinking hard."

I was glad she didn't joke about the contemplated murder as so many of us do before children. We love to chortle about the poor benighted gobbler getting it in the neck.

Of course there is such a thing as being too squeamish. There is no reason why children should not know facts. And yet I have always had a repugnance about allowing my children to see certain things.

I have never forgotten how I found one of them crying in the kitchen over two rabbits a friend had shot and sent us. As their parents the little carcasses lay soft and mute on the kitchen tables he was trying to reconcile this murder with the stories I read her every night about Peter Rabbit and his immortal relative, Uncle Wiggily.

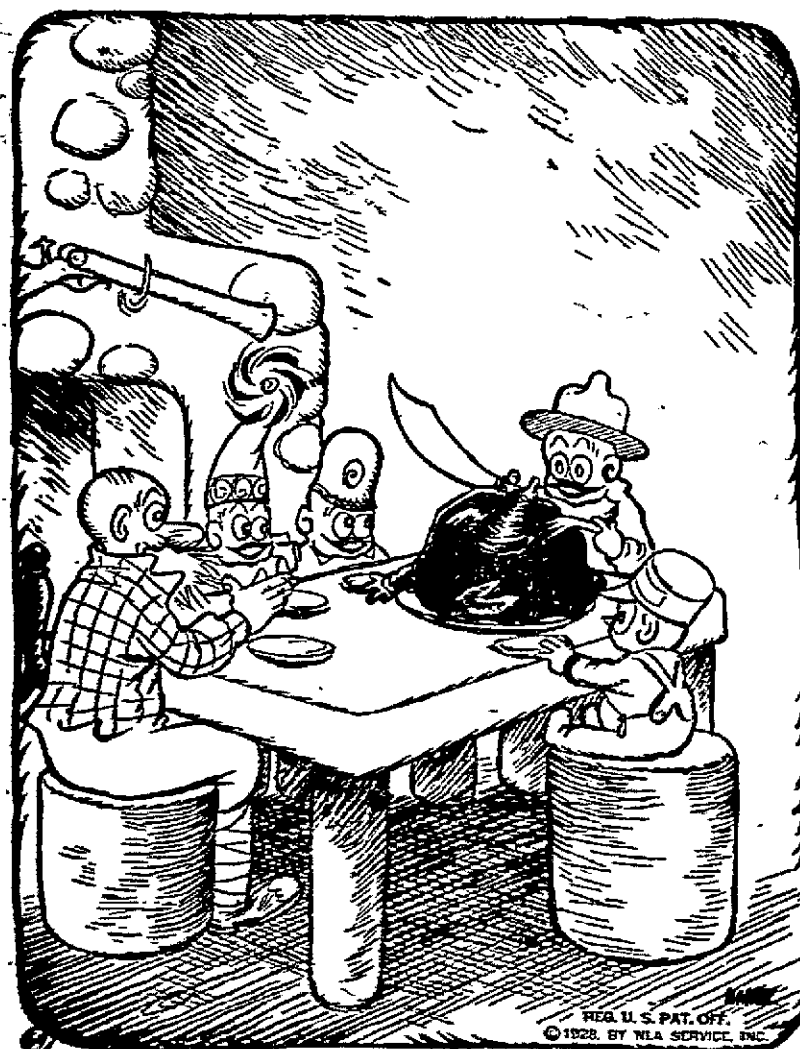

It seems to me that we ought to keep our food murders, so to speak, in the background as much as possible.

THE TINYMITES

By Hal Cochran

READ THE STORY. THEN COLOR THE PICTURE

THE dawn broke on Thanksgiving Day. The Tynymites woke and yelled, "Hurrah! Hop up there, Mister Hunter. We're to have a dandy feast. We'll start the fire to blazing high, until it brightens up the sky. We want to be of aid, and we can do that much, at least."

The hunter sat right up in bed. He rubbed his eyes, and then he said, "Good morning, little Tynymites. You all seem full of cheer. But I don't blame you, not a bit, since all of you are feeling fit to eat some food and celebrate the wondrous day that's here."

It wasn't long till he was dressed. He rushed outside and said, "This best for me to look around and see that everything's all right." They found their turkey in the pot. "Yum, yum," cried one. "Twirl soon be hot, and when we start to eat it, it will disappear from sight."

The fire was made. The turkey steamed, and every little Tynymite

"Service." Parties Add To Washington Society

Miss Carroll Henderson, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Robert Henderson, and Miss Engarcia Freyer (inset), daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Frank B. Freyer, are popular members of the "service set" in Washington society. Miss Henderson is a debutante this season.

Washington—(P)—Gayest of the gay in the social whirl of the capital are those fortunate girls whose fathers are officers in the army, navy or marine corps.

The girls known as "service debs," if they chance to be in the debutante class, are not only invited to the brilliant social functions which other debutantes attend, but they also are included in all the military affairs of the winter.

Not the least of these is the big army-navy relief ball which will be given at the Willard hotel on Thanksgiving eve with a list of patrons and patronesses headed by Secretary and Mrs. Curtis D. Wilbur. There are also the navy-mine dances which are among the smart events of the winter. On Christmas eve comes the first annual midshipmen and cadet ball at the Mayflower hotel, in which the army, navy and marine forces join to give a party resplendent in uniforms and gorgeous gowns.

Sometimes a girl who has not yet made her debut mingles in this social gaiety, her parents entertaining for her informally and saving her debut for another season. This is the case with Miss Engarcia Freyer, the young daughter of Captain and Mrs. Frank B. Freyer, and one of the most popular of the younger set here. Her parents will entertain at a tea dance at the Mayflower for her the day after Christmas.

Both of Miss Freyer's parents have been decorated by the Peruvian government with the Order of the Sun and Mrs. Freyer is distinguished as the only foreign woman to have received this honor. The decoration was bestowed as the result of her humanitarian work in Lima when Captain Freyer was stationed there as head of the United States Naval mission from 1920 to 1922. Captain Freyer, who is assistant judge advocate of the navy, was decorated in recognition of his service in re-organizing the Peruvian navy.

Another popular girl in the navy set is Miss Carroll Henderson, the blond young daughter of Captain and Mrs. Robert Henderson. Miss Henderson will make her debut this season. Miss Elizabeth Kennedy, another "service bud" and the daughter of Captain and Mrs. R. W. Kennedy, will be guest of honor at a dinner dance November 30 to be given by Major General John A. Lejeune and Mrs. Lejeune at their home at the Marine Barracks.

The same garments are offered in washable silk with bands of colored silk and monogram to match.

Household Hints

STOPPER HINT
When putting a stopper into a bottle, always give it a half turn round after it is in. This prevents sticking.

BRIGHT RUGS
To keep the color in your rugs bright, sweep occasionally with a broom dipped in turpentine water. This prevents moths, also.

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS—

It isn't necessary to be an actress to make a scene.

THE NEW Saint Sinner

By Anne Austin

Having tea at the same time and place were Tony Tarver and Harry Blaine. Tony had been forced to divide her days into at least four later, to satisfy the demand of her Jorde of admirers. "The only meal she eats at home is breakfast, and not always that," her mother complained to Pat Tarver, but she was scarcely less proud of her daughter's social success than was the adoring father.

And so it happened that the reporter and the girl who had been raised on humble Myrtle street were witnesses of part of the tea-table comedy being played by Cherry Johnson and Alan Beardsley, with Faith as a foil for the "star."

"Act one, scene two, of a little comedy of married life, entitled 'Wavering Wives,' Harry Blaine remarked cynically. "Not that Faith Hathaway is 'wavering' or will ever waver," he added fervently. "She's the kind of wife that makes a fellow believe in the otherwise unholy institution of marriage."

"Words to that effect, uttered by one Tony Tarver, to one Crystal Hathaway recently, and received with much indignation," Tony laughed. "Me—I'm 'agin' marriage myself. Got me a swell little anti-marriage complex. The Freud friends say you get rid of a complex by pulling it out into the open and analyzing it are all the bunk. My little pet complex is bigger and fatter every time I take it out to look at it."

Harry Blaine gave her a searching glance. "I—guess I'm rather sorry to hear that, Tony. I was telling one of the chaps at the office that you're the 'gorgeous girl' of 1928, the most wholesome, gallant, unself-conscious embodiment of the younger generation."

"Tony's eyes misted gratefully, but she answered gaily, mockingly: "Thanks, Harry. That was a wove of a speech. I hope you'll dot it for me before you write 'The Biography of Antoinette Naomi Tarver.' Or shall it be 'Memoirs,' with you as the ghost writer? I hear that's the ticket these days, and 'Memoirs' sounds so much more intriguing."

"Don't kid me so hard," Harry begged. "But—Tony—say, you aren't really serious about this anti-marriage complex, are you? Marriage can be a beautiful and satisfying thing. Look at the Hathaways."

"One swallow doesn't make a cock-tail," Tony reflected flippantly, for she knew what was coming and she wished with all her heart that she could keep him from "speaking." She loathed hating men, and Harry Blaine was such a peach.

"I know I haven't anything much to offer, except the kind of intention that are popularly supposed to make good paying for Hades. . . . Ambition—loads of it. A fair salary. A heart that is generally described as big, and Tony's is just filled with love for you. . . . Aw, I can't say it like one of my characters in a play, but—Tony—" He leaned forward and took her limp hands, his nice face flushed with embarrassment, but his eyes were appealing.

NEXT: Tony "at work."

BREAKFAST—Northern spy apples, cereal, cream, crisp bacon, potatoes hashed in milk, muffins, marmalade, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON—Cream of spinach soup, croquettes, hearts of celery, toasted cheese sandwiches, caramel cornstarch pudding, grape juice.

DINNER—Braised shoulder of lamb with vegetables, stuffed green pepper salad, hot-water sponge cake, fruit in lemon jelly with whipped cream, baked milk, coffee.

Some homemade jelly preserves will be a welcome addition to the dinner menu. Whenever rolls are served jelly or jam is acceptable.

The luncheon dessert is planned especially for children. Keep in mind that whenever cornstarch is used it must be thoroughly cooked.

CARAMEL CORNSTARCH PUDDING

Two cups scalded milk, 4 1/2 tablespoons cornstarch, 2 1/2 cup sugar, 1 1/2 teaspoon salt, 4 tablespoons cold milk, 1 1/2 teaspoon vanilla, 2 eggs.

Melt sugar slowly in an iron frying pan, stirring constantly until liquid. Add slowly to scalded milk, keeping the fire low and taking care mixture does not boil over. Stir cornstarch and salt to a smooth paste and stir into scalding hot milk and sugar mixture. Let caramel and milk become perfectly blended before adding cornstarch. Stir constantly until mixture thickens and then cook over hot water, stirring occasionally for thirty minutes. Remove from heat and stir in yolks of eggs well beaten. Beat hard and add whites of eggs beaten until stiff and dry. Add vanilla and stir just enough to make smooth. Turn into a mold and chill. Serve with sugar and cream.

Italian Feminist Describes New Woman

At the top, Mme. Mengarini, is shown with Premier Mussolini and her husband of the Duce, recently done by official orders. Among her works is a War Memorial that was unveiled by the King and the facade of the new Ministry of Justice in Rome is a tribute to her skill. The inset is a close-up of the sculptress.

NEW YORK—The modern woman is to be admired, though too often she is very superficial.

That is the opinion of Fausta Vittoria Mengarini, herself a modern, and the official sculptress of Italy. Mme. Mengarini, recently arrived in America, has an exhibition at the Art Center.

"It is not our fault if some of us are superficial," she continued. "If too many women acquire a surface sophistication, a surface knowledge and pater, without learning to think deeply, they are not altogether to blame."

"It is because our freedom is so new. We have had to fight for every inch of ground and use up our energies in catching up with men's opportunities. The woman of tomorrow will have no handicaps whatever. This generation's women have not had time to dig deeply into their brains and put them thoroughly to work."

A GOOD FIGHT
Mme. Mengarini really speaks for Italian feminists. For she herself waged a stiffer fight for women than American women have tasted for a long time.

At 18 she wanted to enter the Fine Arts Academy. It was preposterous, at that time, for a girl to attend public classes. But her father, an influential senator and eminent scientist, arranged it. She was the only girl student among 6,000 males. For the sake of conventions she was chaperoned to classes every day by a chambermaid.

Later, in an art competition to which she submitted a model under a masculine pseudonym, she won the award but was denied it, because she was a woman!

Fortunately Mme. Mengarini's family approved of her career. In fact, 40 years ago her mother was a mild scandal because she insisted on an education. The University of Rome had refused her—because she was a woman. But through a compromise she had been permitted to attend biology classes by concealing herself behind a curtain, so the male students should not be aware of her presence.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED
"Of course Italy has changed since mother's time," Mme. Mengarini smiled. "Women may attend universities and art schools now. But there's still great prejudice. Through my whole career I've felt it. At heart many Italians feel if you are born a lady and insist on working, somehow you no longer are a lady."

Mme. Mengarini, however, does not seem to have been retarded much. She has just forged ahead and won the highest art honor a woman ever won in her country. Her bust of Mussolini was done by official order. Her War Memorial was unveiled by the King. Her sculptural decorations adorn the facade of the new Ministry of Justice in Rome. Her latest government commission was the model for a lighthouse to be built in the harbor at Massana.

THE LAND OF THE FREE

"I have come to America because I know it to be the land of women's opportunities," she explained. "I know I shall enjoy working here. But even more, I shall enjoy living where women are encouraged to develop their talents, where work is an honor alike for both sexes."

Hello, Turk; Here's How!

BY SISTER MARY

WHEN the turkey appears as the crowning glory to the Thanksgiving dinner the man of the house must take the center of the stage. The wise host will make a trip to the kitchen before the bird is trussed and inform himself of its general anatomy. The average American man does not carve a turkey many times during the year and if he understands the position of its joints and the direction in which the muscular fibers run, half the battle is won. So the more information he can gather before the festive occasion the easier will be the ceremony.

There are several little things the cook can do to assist the carver. First relieve the host of part of his duties for the day by letting some member of the party who sits next to him serve the vegetables. He will, of course, serve the dressing and if a maid is not in attendance may serve the gravy over the dressing.

In the second place be sure the platter on which the turkey is placed is large enough. Unless the carver is an expert a small platter placed at his left on which he may put the legs and wings as he removes them will make the carving much easier.

And in the last place put the platter directly in front of the carver with the side of the turkey toward him, the drumsticks to the right and the neck to the left. Place the carving fork at the left outside and above the host's personal silver and the steel and carving knife at relatively the same place at the right.

With the stage all set the host can attack the deliciously glazed, golden brown bird.

Insert the carving fork firmly in the center of the breast bone at its highest point. First cut off the second joint and drumstick in one piece making a circular cut around the joint close to the body. With the blade of the knife force the leg back and cut the ligaments holding the thigh bone to the body. With the other fork remove the piece to the smaller platter. Provided, or if the turkey platter is large enough let it stay by the side of the turkey. Remove the wing on the same side in the same way, making a circular cut around the joint close to the body.

Without removing the fork cut thin slices lengthwise from the breast, beginning close to the place where the wing was removed. Work up to the ridge of the breast, keeping the slices thin and parallel to the breast bone.

For the first time the carving fork is removed. Separate the second joint and drumstick, cutting the flesh to the joint, pressing the joint apart with the blade of the knife and cutting through the ligaments. Cut the meat from the second joint and drumstick in neat pieces, cutting parallel to the bone.

Make a wide incision in the apron for serving the stuffing.

Unless you are sure that the whole turkey will be needed for the first serving carve only one side at first and serve it before carving the second side.

Serve a piece of white meat and one of dark meat with some of the stuffing on each plate.

A roast chicken is carved in the same way as the turkey with the exception of the legs. These are not so large and are usually served the whole second joint or drumstick for a portion.

The carving knife must be very sharp for the breast of turkey is quite dry and almost crumbly in texture and next thin slices cannot be made unless the knife cuts without pressure.

PARIS MAKING STYLES STILL VERY FE MININE

BY HAZEL REAVIS

(Associated Press Fashion Editor)
Paris—(P)—The most feminine frocks offered since the war are indicated for spring in the mid-season style collections. Soft colors, soft fabrics, sinuous lines are all prophesied on the basis of new creations designed for wear at southern resorts.

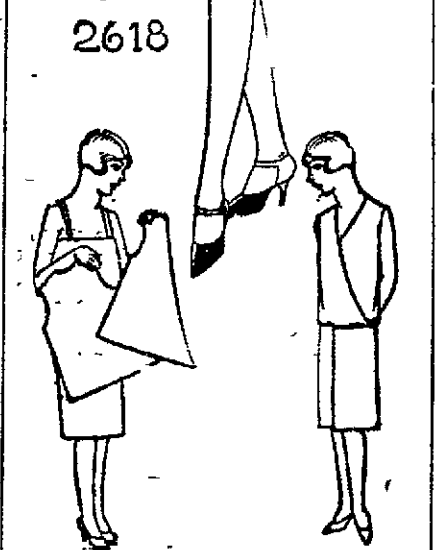

Taffeta does not figure as largely in the new fashions as it did in the autumn collections. More satins, soft failles and crepe satin are used for both afternoon and evening dress. One or two of the most important dress houses eliminate taffeta entirely from their showings.

The softer fabrics are largely responsible for the softer lines of the latest models. They are essentially feminine, with much hand trimming, uneven hems, ample fullness around the hem and none around the hips. Necklines show a tendency toward less conventional lines.

Red is on the out-going tide at many houses. One large house, responsible for the popularization of lip-stick red, shows only one red costume in the new series of models. Some houses eliminate red entirely. Yellow, on the other hand, is in the ascendency with green still a favorite everywhere. Beige shows no sign of giving way before gray, although pale gray afternoon dresses are more widely shown than ever.

There is less lace for evening in the new collections. Crepe satin promises to be the leading material for spring dresses, but faille is the newest.

Wrap Around

CHARMINGLY FEMINE

A new interpretation of the smart feminine mode with wrap-around skirt in tunic styling with deep plaits at side. The surplus closing bodice with one-sided jabot rever is a youthful fashion suited to mature figure. A fitted girdle hugs the hips and fastens at side with decorative buttons. Style No. 2618 is dull silk crepe with mahogany brown printed in beige with plain sheer brown velvet trimmings. It is designed in sizes 16, 18 years, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust. For formal afternoons, it is captivating in sapphire blue sheer velvet self-trimmed, or black sheer velvet. Coppery red canton-faille crepe, black crepe satin with jabot rever, girdle and trimming band of skirt made of the dull side. Featherweight tweed in beige and brown tones, and caramel shade in faille silk crepe, are delightful suggestions. Pattern price 15 cents, in slippings or coin (coin preferred). Our patterns are made by the leading Fashion Designers of New York City and are guaranteed to fit perfectly. MULFORD CAGERS
JOIN "Y" LEAGUEBeguhn Again Manages and Coaches Crack Amateur
Basketball Squad

Kaukauna—Mulford's Twenty-five club basketball team is being organized again this year and has entered the Appleton Y. M. C. A. league. The club will be coached and managed by Stanley Beguhn, who organized it four years ago under the name of the Twenty-five club. Last year the club changed its name to Mulford's and this year the two names will be combined. The team will start practicing in the near future and hold regular practices once a week. The squad had a successful season last year winning 18 out of 21 non-league games. The club will act in a way as a Kaukauna city team.

"We want to have a strong city team which expects to give the citizens and fans a good brand of basketball which will compare to any of the semi-professional teams in the state," said Mr. Beguhn in commenting on the team.

The first game will be played on Saturday, Dec. 8 in the Appleton Y. M. C. A. Non-league games may be arranged with Manager Beguhn. Members of the old squad who have already signified their intention of playing again this year are Walter Kilgas, Sylvester Dix, Harold Frank, Milton Engerson, Jacob Hovde, John Verbaten, Robert Baseman, and one new member Sid Tillie of Wrightstown.

The Catholic Order of Foresters held a meeting at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening in the south side Foresters hall. Routine business took place.

"BROTHERLY LOVE"

Football, as played in a collegiate pentathlon, supplies the fun motivation in "Brotherly Love," which is at Fischers Appleton Theatre Thursday and Friday, as a new Karl Dane-George K. Arthur laugh-maker.

In the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer comedy feature, a broad satire on "reform" prison where convicts hide when pardons are being given out, the gridiron rivalry between leading jalls provides situations brimming with touchdowns of mirth and hilarity.

The story, an adaptation by Earl Baldwin and New Lipton of Petter-son Marzoni's short story, "Big Hearted Jim," which recently appeared in a national magazine, concerns the love of a prison guard and a convict for the idealistic warden's pretty daughter, a nurse in the jail infirmary.

Dane, as the guard, tries to eliminate Arthur, a convict, from his scheme of romance by having him pardoned on the eve of the big football match with the rival penal institution. Determined to be in the game to win for his "alma mater" and the girl he adores, Arthur seeks new felonies to commit. Complications then bring Dane himself into the coils of the law and he is sent to prison.

When the big game is played within the prison walls Dane and Arthur fight a duel for the fair lady's hand with touchdowns and tackles. They both win the game, but Arthur gets the girl, played by Joan Arthur (no relation to George). Edward Connelley and Richard Carlyle are in the supporting cast, which also includes the University of Southern football squads.

Charles F. ("Chuck") Reiser, who directed Buster Keaton in "Steamboat Bill," scores another laugh triumph at the megaphone of the new M-G-M comedy and has put a real "kick" in the gridiron scenes that will live long in the memory of comedy fans.

LEATHERCRAFT HOLDS MEETING AT Y. M. C. A.

The first meeting of the Leathercraft club of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. was held Tuesday afternoon in the department lobby. Several projects, including the weaving of lariards and belts were started. The next meeting will be held next week.

The H-Y club of Appleton high school met at the association building Wednesday evening to discuss a social program for the winter months. Regular business matters were discussed.

Two special swimming classes for boys were conducted in the association pool at 10:30 and 11 o'clock Thursday morning. The department will be closed the remainder of the day.

LARGE SQUAD OF VETERANS REPORT TO DOC MEANWELL

Season to Open Dec. 10 With Franklin College at Madison

Madison, (AP)—Hopes for the first Western Conference basketball championship since 1924 for Wisconsin are being kindled in Madison, as Coach W. E. Meanwell starts training for the season's campaign which includes 12 Big Ten and five other contests.

However, the wily doctor is attempting to squelch championship hopes until the time arrives, for he points out although he has six veterans, and likely sophomores for every position, the men are giants in the main and the rainy players often fail to fit in his short pass and pivot offensive basketball.

Leading the list of players are the two veterans and co-captains, John Doyle, Waukegan, Ill., and Elmer Tenhopen, Cleveland, Ohio, a guard, is husky and is nearly six feet tall, while the rangy Tenhopen, who plays forward, is more than six feet three inches tall.

To aid these veterans is Henry Kowalczyk, six feet four inch junior from Ft. Wayne, Ind. Kowalczyk was a member of the basketball five two years ago, but was not in school last year. He tips center and then probably will be moved to a guard position with Doyle.

A fourth member of the husky group is Harold E. Foster, Chicago, who as a sophomore and center on last year's basketball team, was among the high scorers in the Big Ten. With Kowalczyk back, Foster, who is six feet two inches tall, probably will play guard at the tip-off and then move to center.

Two other veterans, both slightly less than six feet tall, are Lylean Miller, La Crosse forward and Raymond Ellerman, a forward. Both players are seniors and have had two years of experience.

Although Dr. Meanwell refuses to comment on sophomore prospects, he has named several who are nearly certain of seeing service with the varsity this season. They are Sam Behr, Rockford and Milton Gantenbein, La Crosse.

Behr, a brother of Louis Behr, captain of last season's basketball team, is six feet tall and weighs nearly 180 pounds. He is a forward while Gantenbein who received a recognition on the all-state high school basketball team for two years, is a husky guard. Both men were members of the football team.

Besides the conference schedule, a game with Pittsburg university at Milwaukee, Dec. 15, tops the card. Pitt, a year ago, was eastern champion and breezed through a terrific schedule in meteoric style.

The complete Wisconsin schedule: Dec. 10—Franklin here. Dec. 15—Pittsburg at Milwaukee. Dec. 22—Lombard here. Jan. 1—Carleton here. Jan. 5—Minnesota at Minneapolis. Jan. 12—Michigan here. Jan. 12—Chicago at Chicago. Jan. 14—Indiana here. Jan. 18—Minnesota here. Jan. 21—Purdue at Lafayette. Feb. 12—Bradley here. Feb. 17—Indiana at Bloomington. Feb. 18—Northwestern here. Feb. 22—Northwestern at Evanston. Feb. 25—Purdue here. March 4—Michigan at Ann Arbor. March 8—Chicago here.

PICK EIGHTH TEAM IN Y. M. C. A. LEAGUE

Association Will Enter Squad to Compete With Industrial Fives

A Y. M. C. A. men's basketball team was selected as the eighth team in the Y. M. C. A. Industrial basketball league and Edward Bahcall was chosen official referee at a meeting of representatives of the various teams held at the association building at 730 Tuesday evening. Dave Bender will serve as alternate and William Pickett probably will umpire. Paul Miller, assistant physical director of the association was selected one of the referees at a meeting last week, but inasmuch as he will play with the Lawrence college football team next year, accepting the position of referee would make him ineligible.

The eight teams to compete are the Citizens National Bank, Fox River Paper company, Kimberly-Clark company, Neenah, Appleton Coated Paper company, Mulford's Clothing of Kaukauna, Riverside Fibre and Paper company and the Y. M. C. A. men's team. The first games will be played next Tuesday and Saturday evenings, two games being played each night, according to A. E. Jones, physical director of the association and coach of the Y. M. C. A. team.

TENNESSEE HAS PASS ATTACK THAT WORKS

Knoxville, Tenn.—A passing attack that the kind of a passing attack the Tennessee Volunteers are using this season in a march for the southern championship.

The Vol's undefeated to date, have completed at least one pass good for a touchdown in every game played this season.

They scored a touchdown from a pass against Maryville, Centre, Ole Miss Alabama, Washington and Lee and Vanderbilt, and two against Sewanee and Carson-Newman.

HOOVER LIKES FOOTBALL

Herbert Hoover, the next president of the United States, never misses a chance to see a football game, especially if Stanford, his alma mater, is one of the teams playing.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

The Pittsburgh cops could take some lessons in tact from the coppers in Cambridge, New Haven, Philadelphia, South Bend and other football points. The brave Pittsburgh cops drew their clubs and smacked the daylight out of the New York boys who were singing on the field after their team had beaten Carnegie Tech. It was a magnificent spectacle of the night of the law. They don't do that to boys other places. Tex Rickard has a piece of the dog track in Miami. They play an organ and turn on the radio between rounds at the fights in Cleveland's Public Hall. Paul Scully, Penn fullback, holds an indoor record for 50 yards. Ducky Swan, star halfback of the University of Dayton, has his eyes on West Point. And he's one of the best ball players in the country.

PACKERS PLAYING JACKETS THURSDAY

Eddie Kotal Again in Condition and Will Cavort at Halfback

Philadelphia, Penn.—Thursday is another day for the Packers and every member of the Green Bay squad is determined to make it a different story than the Pottsville fiasco, when the Packers take on the Frankford team here.

The squad has enjoyed two workouts at Frankford field and the team isn't letting any grass grow under its feet these days. Both Tuesday and Wednesday, the players went through some lengthy practice sessions and there seems to be a punch in the work again.

Capt. Lambeau has been using a dipper to wipe out the frost. It is quite likely that Darling will start in Thursday's game at center while Jugger Earpe occupies a tackle post. Play of the Packers tackles against Pottsville was way off color and a change was necessary. Bo Molenda will be at fullback when the whistle blows and it is possible that Lambeau may be in there calling signals in place of Ed Dunn, who got handled pretty roughly by the Miners.

EDDIE WILL PLAY
The two invalids, Tom Nash and Eddie Kotal, have been reported "playable" by Dr. Kelley and are scheduled to start. The return of Kotal to the Bays backfield should help plenty.

The Green Bay players are determined to wipe out the defeat of early season and it is a safe bet that the Jackets will know they have been through a ball game before the final whistle blows. The Frankford fans are quite confident of a win, but Coach Wier and his players aren't that way at all. They figure the Bays will be going strong on Friday day.

Fair weather is forecast for Thursday but there is a biting northwest wind and the home folks are complaining about the chilly spell even though the freezing mark has just been touched. It is a good Wisconsin brand of weather.

According to present plans the Packers will leave here Saturday afternoon for Providence where they are scheduled to Sunday. After the game with the Steamrollers, the Bays will return to Atlantic City for a few days practice before boarding a rattler Thursday night for Chicago.

The Packers are booked to reach Chicago Friday night and will stop at the Parkway. The club will practice Saturday morning at Wrigley field in preparation for the game with the Bears, Dec. 8.

CONFERENCE HEADS MEET HERE, DEC. 6

Will Award Fox Valley Football and Cross Country Honors

Manitowoc will be awarded the honors in cross country and East Green Bay in football, at the next meeting of the Fox Valley conference, which has been called at Appleton for Thursday, Dec. 6. The meet will be attended by principals, athletic heads and coaches of the eight schools in the conference—East and West Green Bay, Marinette, Oshkosh, Fond du Lac, Appleton, Sheboygan and Manitowoc.

At this meeting officials will be picked for the coming basketball season and the 1929 football schedule arranged. The basketball season will open on Jan. 4 with Manitowoc at East Green Bay, Marinette at Oshkosh, Appleton at Sheboygan and West Green Bay at Fond du Lac.

There will be a general discussion of the athletic situation in the conference at this session. By a rule of the conference each high school must play the other teams in the conference at football, which makes seven conference games a season. It is expected that the 1929 season will open the last Saturday in September.

The meeting may also take up the question of the 1928 track and field meet, which was held at Manitowoc last summer. Manitowoc will probably stand ready to entertain the athletes if the conference should agree to come here once more.

Star at Campion

Here are the Pfeiffer brothers who have been playing a star game of football at Campion, Prairie du Chien. Ed (left) holds down the regular position of center and Richard of left guard. Together they have been a good reason for the undefeated record which Campion holds for the season against strong teams from Wisconsin, Iowa and Illinois. The team has piled up 250 points against its opponents six. Campion will meet the strong Marquette University High squad on Thanksgiving Day and will attempt to clinch the title for the Catholic Championship of Wisconsin.

EASTERNERS DON'T LIKE DRIBBLE RULE

Want to Take Football Characteristics from Caging Game—St. John

New York, N. Y. — The dribble threatens to cause most of the controversy in basketball this season if the interpretation meeting of eastern officials, coaches and players held last night at the Astor hotel is a fair indication of viewpoint of the country at large toward the 1928-29 rules.

The desire of the joint rules committee to lessen dribbling caused the following interpretation to be added to the rules at the annual rules meeting in April.

DRIBBLE BLAMED.
"If a dribble charged into an opponent, or makes personal contact with an opponent, without an apparent effort to avoid such contact, a personal foul shall be called on the dribbler. If, despite the dribbler's effort to avoid contact personal contact ensues, either player, or both may be guilty, but the greater responsibility is on the dribbler if he tries to dribble by an opponent who is in his path."

L. S. St. John of Ohio State, chairman of the joint rules committee, said the intention of the rules committee was to do away with the dribble as much as possible.

"We want to prevent a player from running down the court with the ball like a football player going down the field," St. John said. "If the dribble is not curbed, the game is going out of hand and away from the A. B. C.'s of basketball."

SCORE STALLING.
Stalling was scored by St. John who said that everything possible is being done to speed up the game and prevent it from lagging.

"The dribbler who gets the ball and tries to go around and by everybody or gets the ball and holds it is a menace to the game and should be done away with," he said. "It is the tendency of the better teams to eliminate stalling."

Officials were instructed to forego the old tradition of holding a defensive man responsible for a vast majority of collisions with a dribbler, excepting where the defensive man clearly commits a foul.

N. Y. U. CLOSING GRID SEASON WITH AGGIES

First Time West Coast Team Has Played on Atlantic Slopes

New York, (AP)—New York university winds up its football season in an intercollegiate game with Oregon State college at the Yankee stadium Thursday afternoon. Coach Chick Meenan and his men are after a decisive victory to top off the most successful campaigns in the history of the university.

Meenan's strongest available lineup, headed by Ken Strong, the country's leading scorer, will be sent against the invaders. Except for substitution of Ollie Stattenstein for Captain Al Lasseman, who was badly hurt in the Carnegie game Saturday, the team will be the same as started previous big game. Of the regulars, Strong, Stattenstein and Bob Barrabee, end, will be playing their last college game.

The colorful Oregon team, which is the first from the Pacific coast ever to play on the Atlantic slope, includes Coquelle Thompson, an Indian, and "Honolulu" Hughes, a boy from Hawaii who sometimes kicks with his bare feet. Around The Sport World

BY GOLLY! A BIG WAR!

Some young typewriter athletes of the West Coast are really something, a few days ago that put their athletic officials in the grease.

The young men who manufacture the powerful pieces in the Daily Northwestern got hunched up on a hot idea and proposed that Chicago be kicked out of the Western Conference because of her lack of competitive spirit and, incidentally, her terrible football team.

The literary athletes at Michigan intercepted the pass and ran 70 yards with the editorial opinion that Northwestern ought to be tossed out of the conference because of her low standard of eligibility.

The Michigan boys made first downs with the charge—"We feel certain that Michigan, herself which has not been really noted for 480 weakness of her athletic teams, will be perfectly willing to abandon the Big Ten entirely to Northwestern and any professional teams which can give her adequate competition."

The boys went on to recall—"It is almost within the memory of the present student, undergraduates that Northwestern herself furnished the annual doormat upon which other teams of the Big Ten rubbed their muddy feet with abandon."

Strance to say the young men of the student training corps were not rushed to their muskets. The athletic officials laughed it off and said that the literary athletes must have their man and they were speaking only their uninformed opinions.

Frosh Center

Al Liethen who starred for Appleton high school on the gridiron for three years, has just completed a season of playing with the Freshman team at the University of Wisconsin.

Although Al attended Marquette university last year and played on the Freshman team there, he did not have enough academic work when he enrolled at the state school and was still listed as a freshman.

Liethen played great ball for the yearlings all season, and in many scrimmages against the varsity showed up well under fire. It is expected that there will be a fight between Liethen, Chet Miller and Moose Krueger for the center position left vacant by the graduation of Cliff Conroy regular varsity center this year.

LEPROSY CURED, MAN BACK HOME AFTER 28 YEARS

Country's Most Famous
Leprosy Returns from Long
Isolation Period

New Orleans, La.—John Early has come back from the dead! John Early, the country's most famous leper, has heard the "unclean" cry of his kind changed to "clean." He may take his place in the world of men. John Early is cured.

This is the vivid climax of one of the most dramatic human epics ever lived in this country.

John Early, leper, became as famous as any public celebrity during the 13 years he played hide-and-seek with Uncle Sam. Told that he was a leper, Early first refused to believe and ran away from the hands that would help him.

HE FLEES AGAIN

He was found, arrested, imprisoned, tried for leprosy again and again only to defy his captors and benefactors and disappear again.

A baffled, beaten, contradictory man, sometimes submissive and grateful to the hands of science which would help him, again sullen and rebellious and so hungry for the mountains of his own country that, clean or unclean, he must hide himself in their hollows.

Early suffered a whole nation with fear.

The headline "Early at Large" could send whole cities into panic, and Uncle Sam hunted him as though he were a murderer with a price upon his head.

Less than two years ago, even though told that two more years of the chaulmoogra oil cure would rest him to the world of normal men, Early ran away from the leprosarium at Carville, La. It was his twentieth escape from the world of science which struggled to save him from death.

If he had not been recaptured he would not be cured today—and setting forth with a smile to the mountains for which he yearned while imprisoned in the valley country.

The drama of "Old John Early" began back in 1898 when he enlisted in the Spanish-American War. The other boys brought back rich and colorful memories from Cuba and the Philippines.

Perhaps John Early had his memories, too, but he also brought back that disease which has caused men to shudder ever since the dawn of time—leprosy.

DIDN'T RECOGNIZE

John Early did not know it at once. He was married and the father of two children before his malady appeared. Doctors made mysterious references to "something" in the tropics. Early went to Washington and asked for help.

"You are a leper," they told him.

"I am not," said Early.

But the government seized him. It was the scourge and humanity in his person. He could deny his state, but the government had millions of other human beings to consider. One leper can quickly infect an entire country.

They built a special home for him—a two-part brick home with a wall down the center. Early, unclean, lived on one side of the wall; his wife and children, clean, lived on the other.

The world of fiction contains few scenes more poignant than life in this brick home. Armed guards saw to it that the emotions of a human man, hungry for sight of wife and children, never interfered with the only life possible for an imprisoned leper, ward of the nation, to be saved by the nation.

A piano was moved close to the wall on the wife's side of the house. The leper sat on the other side, listening to old army songs and songs of home. Sometimes the wife and children were permitted to stand ten feet away from "Daddy" and blow him a goodnight kiss. Armed guards were ready at a second's notice to enforce the deadline.

DOCTORS DISAGREED

Then even government authorities disagreed as to whether they had a leper on their hands or not. Early was taken from the brick house and to New York in a box car.

Years went on with Early playing peek-a-boo and hide-and-seek with the government. One escape followed another, for he himself would never shout his own "unclean," and continued to fight the government which tried to help him.

There was one period when he was pronounced cured and lived like any other man with his family. Then the government brought in the same old report, rearrested him, and the game was on.

For the last ten years Early has been in the Carville leper station under the special charge of Dr. O. E. Denney, officer in charge. But he ran away several times, always turning up in the office of Dr. William C. Fowler in Washington.

Whenever the headline had "Early at Large Again," Dr. Fowler would put a sentry at his office door so that the alarm could be given the moment he appeared.

"HAPPIEST MAN ALIVE"

But he came back, and today he is cured! The doctors refuse to use the word "cured," the prefer "arrested," but Carville says that of its more than 40 "arrested" patients paroled to the world not one has come back.

And what of John Early, clean? "I'm the happiest man in the world. I'm going back to my mountain country in North Carolina," he says. "I speak for the goodness of God and the miracles of science."

So Old John Early has gone away, drapper and gay, with a cane in his hand and a song in his heart, and no cry of "unclean" upon his lips.

HIROHITO DYNASTY HAS NO PARALLEL IN WORLD HISTORY

New Ruler, Only 27, Is Grave, Dignified, and Capable
Young Emperor

Tokyo—(AP)—Hirohito, emperor of Japan, is the scion of a dynasty which for unbroken continuity is without parallel in the history of nations.

Still a young man, 27 years old, slender, grave, dignified, Hirohito has actually been ruler of Japan for seven years—from 1921 to Christmas Day, 1926, as regent in place of his invalid father, Yoshihito, and since Christmas, 1926, the date of his father's death, as emperor.

The time between his actual accession to the throne and his formal enthronement is due to the requirement of a year's mourning for the deceased sovereign, after which another season for growing the blessed rice monies must intervene.

Hirohito is 124th of his line. According to the officially accepted chronology the Japanese dynasty is 2,583 years old, for the legend has it that the empire was founded in 660 B. C. by Jimmu Tenna, the great-grandson of the grandson of the great Sun Goddess herself, Amaterasu-Ame-no-Mikoto, the divine ancestress of the Japanese nation and central figure of the pantheon of Shinto, the national religion.

The reigns of the earliest emperors are shrouded in the mists of pre-history. Besides other superhuman attributes the official histories ascribe to the rulers a longevity comparable to that of the Old Testament times that produced Methuselah. The average reign of the first 10 rulers is 63 years, including the 101-year reign of Keian, sixth of the line.

From this and other evidences competent modern historians agree that the official chronology has placed Jimmu Tenna's accession about 800 years too early. Even if this were the case, the dynasty would still have a history of nearly 2,000 years, something no other state history offers to the Japanese record. The nearest approach is the semi-legendary Chow dynasty of China which lasted a little less than 900 years.

Of Hirohito's 123 predecessors eleven have been women, the last of whom reigned in the eighteenth century. Under the present law of succession women are barred from the throne. During the greater part of Japan's history the emperors have led a secluded, almost cloistered existence, and few have been outstanding, historical figures.

The Japanese hold in greatest veneration the first emperor, Jimmu, and the grandfather of the present monarch, Meiji Tenna, the enlightened sovereign under whose reign Japan emerged from medieval feudalism to take her place among the great modern powers.

For more than a thousand years the emperors at Kyoto, the former capital, were little more than symbols of the national unity, wielding no actual power.

COUNTY FARMERS ASK STATE TO OUTLAW QUACK REMEDIES

$1,500,000 WAS SPENT IN STATE ON FAKE SCHEMES

Agriculturists Also Hear Talk on Better Feeding by A. J. Cramer

Fifty Outagamie-co farmers gathered at the Outagamie county courthouse Monday afternoon to hear several speeches on herd improvement and passed a resolution petitioning the state legislature to pass laws forbidding the sale of quack farm remedies.

Passage of the resolution followed an open forum discussion, started by A. J. Cramer, of the state department of agriculture. Mr. Cramer presided at the meeting, which was sponsored by the Outagamie County Mail Order Testing association.

Mr. Cramer pointed out that farmers of Wisconsin had spent $1,500,000 last year for quack medicines. He said that more harm than good was done by these medicines. In one instance, he said, a farmer paid $2 for a small bottle of remedy for contagious abortion. When analyzed the bottle proved to contain nothing more than brown sugar, bran and water and was absolutely useless.

Before the discussion on quack medicines Mr. Cramer gave a talk on Better Feeding. He pointed out that the most important item in increasing milk production was proper feeding. Following is the feeding ration used by the owner of the highest producing herd in the state: 800 pounds of bran, 300 pounds of oats, 200 pounds of barley, 100 pounds of gluten feed, 100 pounds of oil meal and alfalfa ensilage.

SUGGESTS RATIONS
The following rations, suggested by Mr. Cramer, are devised to give a proper balance of foods for cattle:

With timothy hay and silage, a mixture of 300 pounds of oats, 200 pounds of corn, 200 pounds of wheat bran and 200 pounds of oil meal.

With mixed hay and silage, a mixture of 300 pounds of oats, 300 pounds of barley, 200 pounds of wheat bran and 200 pounds of oil meal.

With clover hay and silage, 200 pounds of oats, 200 pounds of corn, 200 pounds of wheat bran and 100 pounds of oil meal.

With alfalfa hay and silage, 300 pounds of oats, 200 pounds of barley, 200 pounds of corn and 100 pounds of oil meal.

E. Wintermeyer, a representative of the federal agricultural department at Washington, D. C., urged the farmers to keep their sires until they had time to secure a proven record and in this way build up a herd that would give the owner a fair return.

On the basis of 40,000 cows, investigated in Wisconsin in 1926, the following results were obtained: 100 pounds of butterfat netted the farmer a $20 loss per year; 150 pounds of butterfat, $10 loss; 200 pounds, $10 gain; 250 pounds, $22 gain; 300 pounds, $40 gain; 350 pounds, $58 gain; 400 pounds, $76 gain; 450 pounds, $94 gain; 500 pounds, $112 gain.

Thus, it is important, Mr. Wintermeyer pointed out, to keep a herd that will pay a good profit that sires should be kept until they have a proven record.

URGES PROVEN SIRE
A proven sire, Mr. Wintermeyer explained, is one that is kept long enough to have five daughters whose records can be compared with the dams.

Since herd improvement work was started there have been only 600 proven sires in the entire United States, Mr. Wintermeyer said, and 203 of these were in Wisconsin. However, only 18 of them are alive today. Of these daughters, whose records are available, one-third bettered the records of their dam, one-third had about the same record, and one-third fell below the record.

He showed how, by keeping proven sires and records, and joining testing associations, it is possible to build up a herd of good paying milk producers.

FARMERS LINING UP

According to a Madison statement, the number of stockmen in Wisconsin who have lost approximately $1,500,000 in the purchase of quack remedies are lining up under the leadership of the Wisconsin Livestock Breeders' association and the Veterinary Medical association to make war on the vendors of these fake remedies and force them, possibly, through legislative enactment "to register the product out, to print the name of each ingredient and the percentage of each active constituent on the label of each package." It is said that the quack cures are sold under the descriptive names of stimulants, tonics, conditioners and regulators.

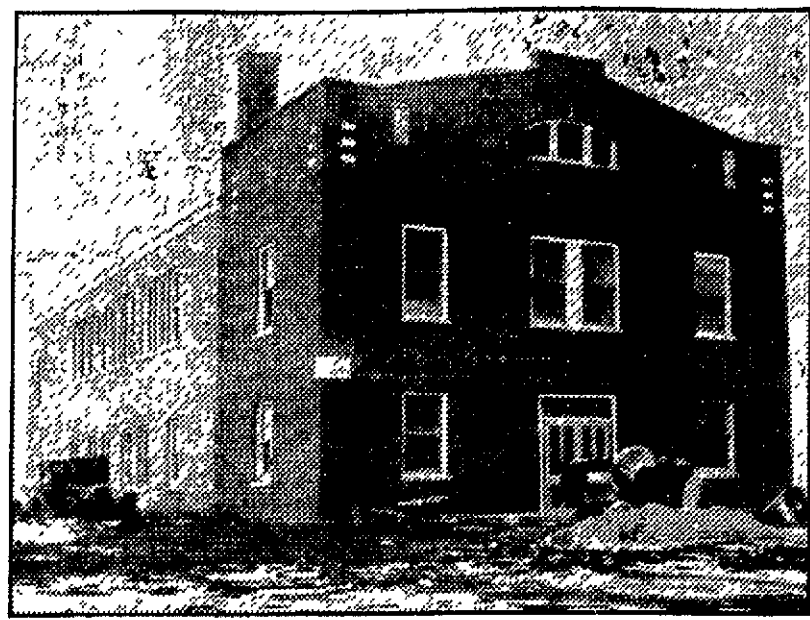

"A conservative estimate of the cost of quack 'cures,'" says B. A. Beach, veterinarian of the state university and secretary of the Wisconsin Veterinary Medical association, "is equal to, if not greater than, the cost of the entire tuberculosis eradication campaign in the state."

"No attempt to restrict the sale of fake remedies has been made in the state, and as a result vendors are able to sell at high prices, products which have little, if any, value whatever. This is a decided menace to the livestock industry of the state and is a matter which deserves the attention of the next legislature."

"A dozen states have taken steps to safeguard their livestock industry against fake remedies. These are Alabama, Arizona, Colorado, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, North Carolina and Tennessee. The need for protection in Wisconsin is as necessary in Wisconsin as in any of these states, as the chief farm industries of Wisconsin are dependent on livestock."

Good Hens, Good Care Will Result In Profits

BY W. F. WINSEY

Kimberly—"To make chickens pay, the owner must have a strain of laying hens, good light and ventilation in his coop, heat enough in winter to make his flock comfortable, and must practice sanitary methods, and feed rations upon which egg production depends," said Peter Van Sanbeek, who in 1913 made his flock of 65 hens pay an average profit above costs of feed of $2.65 and a usual average since of $3.00. His hens fell to an average of $2.00 one year but that year was the only exception.

From No. 1, 1927, to Nov. 1, 1928, his flock of 43 White Leghorns produced 9,970 eggs, or an average of 232 eggs per hen. There is no doubt that if he had trapped his hens that year he would have discovered some 300 egg birds in his flock. His production in figures for that year are: November, 683 eggs; December, 916 eggs; January, 906; February, 879; March, 1,032; April, 1,076; May 1,126; June, 970; July, 848; August, 787; September, 540 and October, 302.

"I am certainly enthusiastic in taking care of poultry and if I were a farmer I would go into the poultry business on a large scale," confessed Mr. Van Sanbeek. "If I were on a farm and had 1,000 hens I am sure that I could make a mighty good living."

Mr. Van Sanbeek has a straw loft henhouse that insects all require, and of egg production, such as warmth, light, and ventilation. The lights are turned on automatically at 5 o'clock in the morning and the hens are kept at work 12 hours each day.

USES THREE YARDS
In the summer, three yards are used, one for the brooder house, one for the old hens, and one that he cultivates for purposes of sanitation. The birds are shifted from one of these yards to the next after hatching. Thirty-six hens after hatching, having renovated his brooder, he gives his chicks their first feed which consists of a commercial mash, changes to a commercial growing mash, and finally when the pullets are of the right age he changes again to the egg-laying mash.

For the chicks he molasses the mash a little with buttermilk until the birds are a week old and then feeds the mash dry. I.e. scatters a little whole wheat in the litter. He gives the chicks all the green feed they want such as lawn clippings and dandelions. As soon as the weather permits in the spring, the chicks go out on the runways.

The cockerels are sold at the broiler stage and the pullets are placed in the laying coop after he has culled them, about two weeks before they are to begin laying, with the best of the old hens culled down 75 per cent.

Beside the dry mash, the layers are fed a scratch feed a mixture of 100 pounds of cracked yellow corn, 100 pounds of wheat, 50 pounds of good oats. The flock gets mangel and cabbage and kale, oyster shells, grit and charcoal.

"TAR HEEL" FARMERS DO WELL WITH BEES
Raleigh, N. C.—(P)—As a farm industry in North Carolina, beekeeping is a 2½-million dollar enterprise. C. L. Sams, state agricultural extension specialist, says the honey alone is valued at that figure. Twelve years ago it was worth only $468,914.6. At that time there were only 20 farmers who had 100 or more colonies, and not a person in the state devoted full time to the industry. A total of 164,956 colonies produced 4,262,856 pounds of honey.

This year there are 214,945 colonies of bees in North Carolina, and they produced nearly 14,000,000 pounds of honey. Due to improved conditions, the increase of 61,000 colonies boosted production nearly 10,000,000 pounds.

"The birth of the earth was a quiet affair," writes Dr. Chamberlain of the University of Chicago, author of the theory that it originated from the sun. Probably that wasn't a presidential year.

HAD INDIGESTION AFTER EACH MEAL
As a stomachic there is nothing better than Dreco, and it should be tried by everyone who seeks relief from indigestion, gas on the stomach, heartburn, cramps, nausea, lack of appetite, irregular bowels and similar complaints. Hundreds suffering in this way have found it just what their rundown systems needed.

"Your Dreco has completely ended all the distress in my stomach," writes Mr. John Trewn, a highly respected farmer of Whitewater, Wis. "I can now eat cabbage and fried foods all day long without suffering afterwards. Before taking Dreco I used to suffer with indigestion after every meal."

Dreco is being especially introduced by Schindler Bros. Drug Stores and sold by druggists everywhere.

GRANGE BUILDING AT GREENVILLE IS NEARLY COMPLETED

Structure Will Be Ready for Use in Four Weeks, Workmen Predict

BY W. F. WINSEY

Greenville—The construction of the new home of the South Greenville Grange has progressed to the point of plastering the walls. When in four weeks' time the building will be ready for service, Greenville, Outagamie-co, and Wisconsin may boast of having the most complete and best grange hall in the United States. George R. Schaefer, master of the South Greenville Grange, says that only two other grange halls in the country are in the class with the local structure. No plans for the dedication of the building have as yet been made.

Although winter is at hand, Mr. Schaefer says that he is well pleased with the progress that has been made in construction of the building. He is also pleased with the saving that has been made through hauling of material and helping in concrete and carpenter work, by the members of the grange.

The new building is two stories high, 40 by 98 feet, and is built of tile and pressed brick. On the ground floor is the kitchen, dining room, furnace room, ticket room, check room, and stock room. On the upper floor is the auditorium, stage, and juvenile room.

Members of the building committee are George R. Schaefer, chairman, Fred Schlitz, Charles Schaefer, Christ Kaplings, John Pingle, Louis Haas, Harvey Jamison, Mrs. R. J. Schaefer, Mrs. William Menning, and Mrs. William Wisner. Albin Haas is in charge of carpenter work and Adam Limpert of the mason work.

WEIGHT OF SOYBEAN HAY TRIPLED BY INOCULATION

Middleburg, Va.—(P)—F. R. Fred, a farmer near Middleburg, points to a personal experience that shows the benefit of inoculating soybean seed with nodule bacteria.

After planting the major portion of a 30-acre field on the top of a high hill with inoculated seed, Fred found his supply of soybeans exhausted. While waiting for more, he drilled untreated seed.

Long before harvest the result became visible to the whole countryside. From the lowlands and from the opposite side a great yellow square became more and more distinct as the acres planted with inoculated seed grew steadily greener and darker and the plants from untreated seed grew yellower and brighter. When harvested, a plot of hay from inoculated seed weighed three times as much as hay from the same sized plot of untreated seed.

RACE HORSES ARE FED NEVEAE HAY AS "TONIC"

Reno, Nev.—(P)—Each year thousands of tons of Carson valley hay are shipped to the east as an exclusive feed for race horses. Shipments now are going to racing stables in New York, New Orleans, Kentucky, Florida and other places in the east and south.

Racing experts say the Nevada climate puts elements into the hay that make it more a tonic than regular feed. It is three-quarters timothy and one-quarter alfalfa. Ranchers receive $18 to $20 a ton for it, but the delivery price is approximately $50 a ton.

Two doctors at the University of Wisconsin report successful experiments with a cure for insanity. But as yet to report of any of the duflers burning their clubs has been received.

HORTICULTURE RESEARCH UNDER SINGLE CHIEF

DR. EUGENE C. AUCHTER

Washington—(P)—To facilitate cooperative research upon the many complicated problems of horticulture, Dr. William A. Taylor, chief of the federal bureau of plant industry, has grouped under one head the physiological, pathological, and geographical investigations of his office and selected Dr. Eugene C. Auchter, of the University of Maryland, to direct the work.

Dr. Auchter will be known as the principal horticulturist of Dr. Taylor's division, and will administer a total budget of approximately $1,000,000 annually.

As principal horticulturist of the Bureau of Plant Industry, Dr. Auchter will assume general supervision not only of the vegetable gardening research of the present Office of Horticulture, but also of the physiological project of the Office of Plant Geography and Physiology, as well as the work of the Pathological Laboratory and of the Office of Vegetable and Storage Diseases and the entire Office of Fruit Diseases and the Office of Crop Physiology and Breeding.

In grouping the work under one chief, it is the purpose of Dr. Taylor to follow through their entire life cycles the diseases of plants which at present are known to the department of agriculture only as they affect an individual crop. The results are expected to show when and where various plant diseases may be checked best, knowledge that may save American farmers millions of dollars annually.

RYE KINGS PREPARING TO HOLD SOVEREIGNTY

South Manitou, Mich.—(P)—Marking time on the 128-acre farm, 10 miles from the mainland in Lake Michigan, George Hutzler and his son, Lewis, "Michigan's rye kings" are preparing to defend their crown against all challengers at the International Grain and Hay Show in Chicago, Dec. 1 to 3.

For six of the last seven years, the Hutzlers have gone to the Chicago show and returned with the rye championship of the United States and Canada. They supply the only registered rye seed that can be obtained in the United States.

Their farm is segregated from the rest of the world, on South Manitou Island and no pollen from other rye fields is carried to their own to become crossed with the pure rye strain.

While yields are not heavy on their light-sandy soil, the culture is pure and for many years the quality has been better than any other rye producer could boast.

UNITED EFFORT BRINGS SUCCESS TO DAIRY FARMERS

Constructive Program Relative to Herd Improvement Helped Badger Dairymen

Madison—(P)—Wisconsin's success in dairying has been in a large measure the result of united effort on the part of various organizations and individual dairymen in carrying out a constructive program relating to herd improvement, said George C. Humphrey, of the state agricultural college extension station.

He discussed the general topics of improved breeding, better feeding, sanitation and health measures, and herd testing.

On the second of the subjects he said dairy cattle production survey figures indicate that the amount of feed supplied to dairy cows accounts for one-half of the variations in the cost of milk production and that the quality of feed used in rations accounts for one-sixth of these variations.

"Feed being the source of growth and development on the part of dairy cows, as well as the source of milk production, makes it a subject which cannot be ever emphasized in the program of work relating to dairy herd improvement. Dairymen in every community of the state have the opportunity to assist in a better program of feeding dairy cattle by giving consideration to details relating to farm and herd management."

"(a) The improvement of soil and of farm land. We may well heed the words of the old Scotch farmer who said, 'If your land is hungry, feed it; if it is foul, clean it; if it is wet, dry it.'"

"(b) The improvement of pasture and the growing of special crops for summer feed."

"(c) The growing of alfalfa and of soybeans for special hay crops."

"(d) The preparation of winter rations which will prove most economical in stimulating the production of individual cows."

"(e) Community organizations for grinding, mixing, and buying of feeds most suitable for dairy rations."

"(f) Provision for supplying dairy cattle with proper amounts of water, salt, minerals and vitamins to insure proper growth, maintenance, and milk production."

Sixty Guernsey heifers purchased from farmers of the county were inspected by Dr. William Madsen last week preparatory to shipment to Captain, Okla., where they will be used for starting calf clubs. The heifers were shipped Friday, according to Dr. Madsen, and were healthy and in good condition. They were examined for traces of tuberculosis and other bovine diseases.

CROP STATISTICIAN FINISHES BULLETIN

Work Is Presented in Five Chapters Covering Farm Statistics

Madison—(P)—The result of many hours of work under the "midnight oil" of Sundays spent in the office and of the help of University students and others, "Bulletin No. 90" on agriculture statistical atlas has been published by Walter Ebling, federal-state crop and livestock statistician.

Even Mrs. Ebling aided in getting up the state-federal agricultural statistics book. She drew the cover design.

It presents five chapters, covering almost everything in the line of farm statistics on which any resident of the state might wish information. The first chapter deals with farm production and gross income, presenting a summary of acreage yields, prices, production and value of leading crops and the principal incomes from crops and livestock as well as expenditure items and U. S. farm price and purchasing power data.

Chapter two is on fundamental factors in Wisconsin farming, showing topography, soil, climate and other ranges throughout the state by maps and charts, which have an important bearing on land utilization and production.

The third chapter gives detail studies of all Wisconsin crops, county statistics on acreage, yields, production with county figures and numbers and value of livestock, with accompanying national and world figures.

The last chapter is on farm population and rural living standards, presenting a graphic and tabular presentation of the distribution of the state's population in 1920, farm population in 1925, foreign elements in the population, county data on twenty-one items such as farm radios, gravel roads, automobiles, telephones, and milk production.

Big Ulcer All Healed

"Now I Can Walk" Says Mrs. Southcott

"Here is another letter that makes me proud," says Peterson. "One that I would rather have than a thousand dollars."

"It seems like a miracle, but it's true, every word of it. I know it because I get similar letters almost every day from people who have used Peterson's ointment for old sores, eczema and piles. 'Is it any wonder I am proud?'"

Dear Sirs:

"I was an untold sufferer from an old running sore and ulcer. I had tried most everything without any relief from pain. A friend told me of your wonderful ointment and the first box took away the pain that had not left me before in years and after using just nine dollars worth of the salve I am cured. The ulcer was 9 inches by 6½ inches, is all healed and I can walk. Never, never will I be without Peterson's again. 'You may use this to recommend your ointment if you wish. I cannot say enough to praise it.' Yours truly, Mrs. Albert Southcott, Lyndonville, N. Y. Generous box $5 cents. adv.

JUNIORS WIN OVER SOPHOMORES, 31-7

Class Winner of Intramural Tournament of New London High School

New London — Juniors defeated the sophomores in the tie-off game on Tuesday evening at Werner's hall. The score was 31 to 7, and the Juniors, as a result won the silver trophy contributed to the winner of the intramural tournament. Juniors began with a lead and at the end of the quarter piled up a substantial gain. At the end of the half the score was 20 to 3. During the second half Juniors played a stalling game, ending the game with the 31 to 7 lead.

Seven freshmen will play on the squad of the regular team. This is an excellent showing for the class, said Coach Polomis. He has presented the following names as regulars to the year's team: Bessett, Calf, Dornbach, Reuter, Noack, Lowecke. Six sophomores who are found eligible for the regulars are Pfeifer, Brown, Ladwig, Hoba, Jassman and Westphal. Seven Juniors are also on the list, those included being Bleck, Pollard, Dent, Dayton, V. Burton, Froelich and Sackett. No seniors will play on the team.

The standing of the classes in the just finished intramural tournament is given with Juniors leading in first place. They have won six games and lost one out of the seven games played by sophomores and Juniors. Sophomores won second place with five games won and two lost. Freshmen won four games and lost two, thereby winning third place, and seniors finished last with no victories and six losses.

THANKSGIVING

WITH the dawn of Thanksgiving Day the glowing spark of gratefulness which is within the breast of everyone bursts into flame. This day we thus give thanks, for having so generously received. What a wonderful American thought — one selected day so devoted to giving thanks.

And as we partake of the day's festivities at the firesides of friends and families, what a great good for finer citizenship comes from the influence of it all. Indeed, we have much more to be thankful for in having Thanksgiving Day itself: the blessedness the day itself bestows.

SCOUTS MAY HAVE OUTDOOR PROGRAM

Patrol Leaders May Stage Saturday Meeting in Open at Valley Camp

The Saturday program for the valley council Boy Scout patrol leaders' conference probably will be held out-of-doors at Camp Chickagami, valley scout camp on Lake Winnebago providing weather conditions permit and transportation facilities are provided according to M. G. Clark, valley scout executive. Most of the program is to be centered about campcraft, project work, including the use of an axe, fire building, tracking and others.

The conference has been arranged for older scouts who have advanced to the leadership of the various groups. Many of the boys who are now juniors and seniors in high school have been scouts for the past five and six years, and who accumulated enough knowledge in scouting to take over and direct a patrol or troop according to Mr. Clark.

The first sessions of the conference will be held at the St. Thomas Episcopal church, Neenah, Friday afternoon. Several valley scout leaders, including scoutmasters, assistant scoutmasters, patrol leaders, junior patrol leaders, and assistant leaders will give short talks. Ways of gaining leadership in troops and patrols, and project study for scouts will be discussed.

RESORT MEN GET HEAVY SENTENCES

Charles Moder Must Spend from One to Three Years in State Prison

Charles Moder and Ewald Brockman, alleged proprietors of Green Gables, a roadhouse on Highway 41 between Menasha and Appleton, were given heavy sentences in municipal court at Oshkosh by Judge A. H. Goss, on charges which grew out of a raid on the place several weeks ago.

Moder drew a sentence of from one to three years in state prison at Waupun for keeping a disorderly house and he drew a similar sentence for inducing and permitting a female, under 21 years of age, to resort to a disorderly house. The sentences are to run concurrently, and one day of each year Moder must spend in solitary confinement. Sentence was suspended on the charges of sale and possession of intoxicating liquor.

When Brockman's attorney pleaded for leniency for his client because of his wife and child Judge Goss stipulated a fine of $200 and costs on the charge of possession of intoxicating liquor and also a $300 fine on the charge of selling intoxicants. If Brockman doesn't pay he must serve 60 days in the county jail.

GRADE PUPILS PRESENT THANKSGIVING PROGRAM

Pupils of the fifth and sixth grades at First ward school present a program in the assembly room at the school Wednesday. The program included piano solos, dances, songs, poems and readings.

Annabelle Wolf played the "Tulip," Marian Dettman the "Dance of the Sunbeams," and Lois Niemstedt, "Fleeting Hopes." The poems "Thanksgiving" and "Thanksgiving Day," original compositions, were given by Audrey Evans, and five questions were presented by Barbara Wriston, Mary Voecks and June Porter named "Southern Memories," "The Teacher and the Grandmother," Dorothy Shore, "Our Praise," Alvin Meyer, "Thanksgiving Creed," Bertha Kirchner, "Turkey Review," Billy Commentz, "Better Bunnies," Florence Mooson, "We Thank Thee," Helen Bomier, "Turkey in Our Garden," Lucille Sklar, "The First Thanksgiving," and William Mehring, "The Two Thanksgivings." The fifth grade girls sang "Little Pilgrim Maiden," and the pupils of grade 6 B sang "Thanksgiving Day."

2 MEN CHARGED WITH TRAFFIC VIOLATIONS

Two men, arrested Wednesday by Fred Arndt, motorcycle officer, for traffic violations are to appear in municipal court before Judge Theodore Berg Friday morning to answer charges. They are: Allen T. Gallagher, 223 N. Green Bay-st., arrested for traveling 39 miles an hour on N. Richmond-st. and Sylvester Freiburger, Hortonville, arrested for parking on W. Winnebago-st. without lights.

Oscar Helm, 1353 W. College-ave., arrested Wednesday by Officer Frank Johnson, for parking within a restricted zone at a corner, left a deposit of $3.20 and costs to pay his fine.

WOMAN KNOCKED DOWN BY AUTOIST

Mrs. Selma Stendel, 47, 1317 S. Oneida-st. was injured about 7 o'clock Wednesday evening when a car struck her as she was crossing Appleton-st. Mrs. Stendel, who was on her way to a doctor's office when she was struck, received a cut in the head and possibly several broken ribs. The driver of the car took her to the hospital.

PIGS TOO HEAVY TO STEAL; JUDGE DISMISSES CHARGE

A charge of attempting to steal pigs from Herman Falk, town of Liberty, lodged against Arthur Peters, town of Liberty, was dismissed by Judge Theodore Berg in municipal court Wednesday for lack of evidence. Peters told the judge that he had seen the Falk boys watching him so he pretended he was trying to steal a 300-pound animal. He pointed out that all the animals in the pen weighed from 50 to 300 pounds and he couldn't have carried one off and that pig's can't be driven. Peters took the whole matter as a joke. The judge believed his story and dismissed the charges.

Board of Public Affairs Also Receives Requests from Normal Schools

Madison—(P)—After hearing the state university's request for $9,581,990 for the 1929-31 biennium, the state board of public affairs, legal financial adjuster for the state, Wednesday accepted the reports of E. G. Doudna, secretary and E. J. Dempsey, president of the board of normal regents.

The financial demands of the state teacher's colleges, presented before the board Wednesday morning have previously been published. After their presentation, the board went into executive session until luncheon and planned to call in other state departments during the afternoon.

The pleas of the board of control, normal regents and state university, the three major financial problems of the state, now have been heard by the board.

The request of the University of Wisconsin for the 1929-31 biennium from the legislature was placed before the board Tuesday by President Glenn Frank and J. D. Phillips, business manager. With this sum, $3,000,000 from the revolving fund which includes athletic receipts and $1,500,000 from fees, will give the university more than $14,000,000 from operating expenses the next two years.

The appropriations asked the legislature is an increase of 7.4 per cent over the amount granted the university by the 1927 legislature.

STAGE AND SCREEN

NEW FILM ABOUNDS IN CLEAN CUT HUMOR

Fox Films comedy-drama of youth, "Prep and Pep," opens today at the Elite Theatre to fill a 2 days' engagement. This production of clean-cut humor was directed by David Butler and features two of the screen's most popular juveniles, David Rollins and Nancy Drexel.

It is the story of Cyril Reade (David Rollins), a bashful boy with European manners who comes to Calver Academy where he is expected to live up to the athletic reputation of his famous father, Tiger Reade.

Unsuspecting, Cyril is led to the slaughter and makes a sorry display of his athletic prowess. Crushed, he determines to run away from school. He is stopped in this by the commandant and his daughter Dorothy (Nancy Drexel), the latter in love with Cyril.

How Cyril fights his way to honor in school athletics provides a series of thrilling episodes.

The background of the story is a military academy with hundreds of cadets. The main part of the picture was filmed at Culver Military Academy, in Culver, Ind. Others included in the cast of "Prep and Pep" besides Rollins and Drexel are: John Darrow, E. H. Calvert and Frank Albertson.

BEG PARDON

In a story published Tuesday by the Post-Crescent concerning the case of Morris Rammer, charged with forgery, it was stated that Rammer, while still a boy, had sold a gun to a playmate who in turn accidentally shot and killed the latter's brother. The fatal shot was not fired by the younger brother but by one of the other boys in the group, according to the mother.

Forfeit Net Game

Failure to notify the Green Bay Y. M. C. A. volleyball team of a change in the schedule for the Fox River valley tournament resulted in Appleton forfeiting a game to the Baymen when they did not appear for a game in the Green Bay association building Wednesday night.

The change in schedule provided that Green Bay should play here Wednesday night but the notice was not sent and as a result the Baymen were waiting on their own floor for Appleton to arrive.

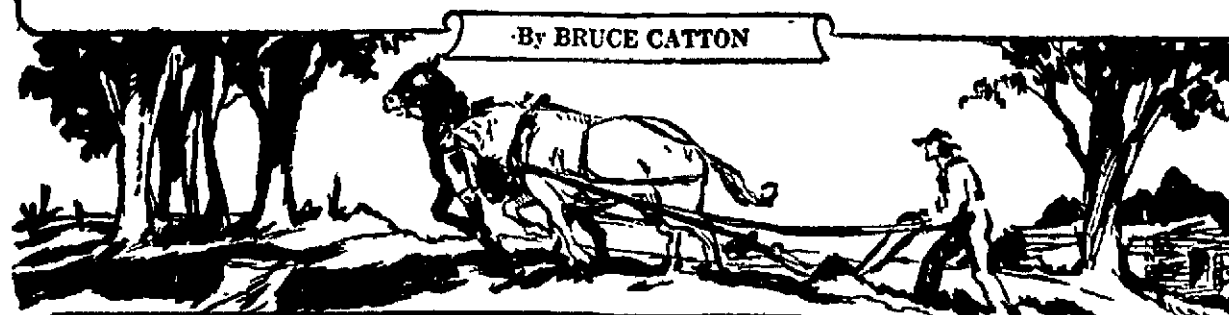

Stolen Car

A reward has been offered for information which will lead to recovery of a Studebaker sedan, 1927 model, stolen Wednesday night at Oshkosh according to word received by local police. The car had the license number D-44722 and was green in color.

Miss Cecelia Quella, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. P. Quella, 329 N. Appleton-st. and Lawrence H. West of New London were married at 8:15 Thursday morning at St. Joseph church. Mr. and Mrs. West will live at Hortonville.

POWER and glory,
Greatness and gold;
That is our story,
Proudly retold.
Let every steeple
Boast with its bell;
We are the people—
We have done well.

Every Thanksgiving
Heightens our pride;
All people living
Envy our stride.
We are the wealthy
Kings of the earth,
Stalwart and healthy,
Knowing our worth.

So we sing, loudly,
In our own praise,
Surveying proudly
All of our days.
Yet, all around us
Shadowy hosts
Rise to confound us—
Pioneer ghosts!

Theirs was the weeping,
Theirs was the pain;
Ours is the reaping,
Ours is the gain;
This is the morrow
Longed-for of old,
Won by their sorrow,
Hunger and cold.

God of Compassion,
Seated on high,
Help us re-fashion
Our haughty cry.
Let us be humble,
Let us be just,
Lest we should stumble
Down to the dust.

For busy cities and peaceful plains,
For shining towers and golden hoard,
For dead men's losses and live men's gains—
Accept our humble thanks, Oh Lord.

Planes Of Every Size Have Stopped At Airport

Airplanes of practically all sizes, from the single seater sport plane to the 14 passenger Ford tri-motored planes, have visited George A. Whitling airport during the last year, according to officials. Eleven planes have been housed in the hangar on the port since its opening.

Of the planes landing here the majority were pleasure bent although 71 brought persons who had business either in Appleton or Neenah-Menasha. One hundred ninety-three planes stopped at the local port. One of the big Ford planes was here to be demonstrated to papermill officials who contemplate buying a huge ship. Another big plane brought a party of eight duck hunters here as guests of a Neenah paper manufacturer.

More than 4,000 persons have taken rides in planes at the local port, according to tabulations. Twenty-two students have been taking ground work and preliminary training and five have obtained department of commerce pilot licenses. The port also has been a mecca for thousands of visitors every weekend or holiday.

The Whitling airport is on a 100 acre tract and has 2 1/2 miles of all weather runways in six directions. Another runway now is under construction. Runways then will be in eight directions. No fees are charged for landing on the field although if the port remains a private project a small landing fee will become a necessity to help general upkeep.

General facilities on the field are a brick and steel hangar, 80 by 100 feet, and a complete repair shop in conjunction. A five room office building and waiting room also has been erected. The largest plane at the local port is the Stinson-Detroit, the Pride of Appleton.

ANNOUNCE TROTH OF FLORENCE AND JOHN

President and Mrs. Coolidge Spend Thanksgiving Day in Virginia

Swannanoa Club, Near Waynesboro, Va.—(P)—President and Mrs. Coolidge turned from their quiet weekend country residence near here Thursday to join with citizens of Charlottesville, home of Thomas Jefferson, in Thanksgiving worship.

They arose to hear that Governor and Mrs. Trumbull of Connecticut, had formally announced the engagement of their daughter, Florence, to John Coolidge, son of the President and Mrs. Coolidge.

Back in the Kitchen of Swannanoa, the country estate where the president is spending his brief vacation in Virginia, a big turkey was in the broiler waiting for Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge to return from Charlottesville Thursday evening.

The president planned to leave Swannanoa by motor for Charlottesville in time for union Thanksgiving services in the First Baptist church. He had accepted an invitation for luncheon directly afterward with Edwin Anderson Almerman, president of the University of Virginia, to which Governor McLean of North Carolina, Governor Byrd of Virginia, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and a company of fifty guests also had been bidden.

The Monticello guard, a Charlottesville military unit, donned their uniforms to act as guard of honor for the president during his stay in their city. They accepted the charge of accompanying him to the North Carolina-Virginia football game after the Almerman luncheon and then to escort him to the city limits when he motors back to Swannanoa.

The President and Mrs. Coolidge are spending their weekend at the Swannanoa country club alone. The only guests they invited, Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Stearns, were unable to come because Mrs. Stearns was ill.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT

Hartford, Conn.—(P)—Formal announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Florence Trumbull, daughter of Governor John H. Trumbull of Connecticut, and John Coolidge, son of President and Mrs. Coolidge.

The announcement was made by Governor and Mrs. Trumbull at a dinner at the Farmington Country club Wednesday night as part of the celebration of their silver wedding anniversary.

No date was announced for the wedding, but indications were it would not take place before summer, thus precluding a white house wedding. The ceremony probably will take place at the Trumbull home in Plainville.

The supper was attended by about 250 guests. Place cards read: "John and Florence."

BELIEVE YOUNG WIDOW SLAIN, BODY BURNED

Louisville, Ky.—(P)—The Rogers case—a mystery in which Mrs. Ella McDowell Rogers, young and pretty widow, vanished from her apartment in the fashionable Cherokee park in the fashionable Cherokee park in the fashionable Cherokee park on Wednesday as detectives resumed an investigation which has been under way for weeks.

Officers are awaiting the result of a chemical examination of chalky substance scraped up in the furnace pipe leading to Mrs. Rogers' apartment. Investigators think this substance may be the remains of incinerated bone.

In further support of the belief that Mrs. Rogers was slain and her body disposed of in the apartment, officers have delivered two furnace grate bars and a wrench, found in the basement of the apartment to a chemist.

PLAN FOR WINTER Plans for winter social events and regular business matters were discussed at a meeting of the H-Y club of the Appleton High school at the Y. M. C. A. Wednesday evening. Committees were appointed to work on the plans.

TWO SHOOT AT SAME TIME, BEAR FALLS DEAD—WHOSE IS HE?

Milwaukee—(P)—Unbeknown to each other, two Milwaukee friends, Ben Scherer and William Zitrow, went hunting in northern Wisconsin near Mercer.

Scherer encountered a big black bear and fired.

Zitrow saw a bear and he fired.

Scherer rushed forward to see his prize, as did Zitrow. Surprised, they greeted each other near the dead form of the bear.

"Hello, Ben," said Zitrow, "Isn't that a fine bear I shot?"

"Why I shot him, Bill," Scherer countered.

An argument followed and they finally agreed that both had come upon the bear from different directions, and had fired simultaneously so that only one gun report was heard. There was evidence of their marksmanship—one bullet through the lower jaw, and another in the left side.

Both claimed him and neither would sell his rights. The bear, weighing about 300 pounds, was brought back to Milwaukee, and Gerold Lachner, Jr., a Milwaukee friend, was to assume the role of Solomon on Thanksgiving eve and divide the bear.

ASK ADEQUATE FUND FOR SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH

Waukesha—(P)—A resolution urging the state legislature to appropriate sufficient funds for scientific research at the University of Wisconsin to enable faculty members to work independent of fellowships was passed by the Wisconsin Farm bureau at its closing session here.

The delegates voiced the opinion that they were not opposed to the university accepting research scholarships and foundations from outside agencies, but pointed out that such research might tend to narrow into certain fields.

An increase in the state gasoline tax was favored by the federation with the reservation "to the end that taxation on general property for highway purposes may be in the near future entirely eliminated, provided that funds so raised be used in developing a farm-to-market system of roads, rather than a thorough road system."

A continuation of government inquiry into the growth and methods of capitalization of public utility corporations was requested by resolution.

The board of directors chosen for the following year consists of Joseph Schwartz, Spring Green, Alfred Elver, Middleton, and Aaron Kuler, Jefferson.

480 CANS TROUT PLANTED IN YEAR

Local Sportsmen Fill Nearby streams to Maintain Interest in Fishing

Approximately 480 cans of fingerling trout, about two inches in length, were planted in streams in this vicinity during the past year, according to local sportsmen. Three hundred and seventy-eight cans were planted in some of the smaller streams tributary to it. Thirty-five cans were "rainbow" trout. The fish were planted by groups of local sportsmen, members of the Izaak Walton league, the Evergreen club, and the Outagamie Fish and Game association. Some local sportsmen are members of all the organizations.

The Evergreen club planted about 380 cans of fingerlings in the Wolf river while other organizations planted fish in some of the smaller northern lakes. The fish were secured from the United States hatcheries at La Crosse, a private hatchery at St. Croix Falls, and the government hatcheries at Wild Rose. The number of small fish planted in this vicinity was approximately 10,000. About 250 fish are sent in a can.

CHRISTMAS TREES AGAIN ABUNDANT

Weather Has Been Favorable to Cutting, and Prices
Are Reasonable

Christmas trees are abundant this year and will sell for about the same prices as a year ago, probably a little lower, according to local dealers who are now waiting for shipments. Weather conditions have made it possible for farmers and tree cutters to get into swamps and cut trees with little difficulty. Some years swamps were filled with snow and water and the weather was extremely cold, making swamps unpassable.

Those years Christmas trees sold at exorbitant prices.

Very few shipments have been received here thus far. Some farmers are reluctant about cutting trees at this time, because they claim there hasn't been sufficient frost, and trees bought now will be short-lived. Some local dealers buy directly from farmers and do not order in advance, while others depend on certain farmers each year to bring them their supply of trees.

SPORTSMEN PROTEST EDICT OF INDIANS

Fishermen Resent Attempt to Bar Fishing on Reservation at Keshena

Sportsmen of this vicinity are preparing to protest to the federal bureau of Indian affairs at Wash- ington, D. C., against granting a petition, presented by the Menominee tribe on the reservation at Keshena, asking that issuing of fishing permits to white fishermen be discontinued.

At a recent tribal meeting the Indians prepared the petition, claiming as a reason for their action, that the white men committed depredations on the reservation.

"The Indians have recourse against white men who commit depredations," one sportsman here said, "by revoking his special license and never granting him another." This same sportsman said he had never seen an instance of any depredation of any kind committed by a white man.

He pointed out that in 1927 local sportsmen had planted 400 cans of trout in the streams on the reservation and this summer 387 more cans were planted. He said that trout fishing on the reservation had been built up largely by the white men and he could see no reason why they should be deprived of the privilege of fishing there.

SANATORIUM PATIENTS EXPRESS APPRECIATION

At this season of the year when everyone is imbued with the Thanksgiving spirit, the patients of Riverview sanatorium have joined in an expression of appreciation for the many kindnesses which have been showered upon them during the past year. The following letter was received by the Appleton Post-Crescent:

"Ours is the only country in the world that has set aside a day for Thanksgiving. Too much emphasis cannot be placed upon the command to give thanks. We of Riverview sanatorium are thankful for the joys, the floral offerings, the books and magazines, fruit and delicacies, kind words and contacts with friends. We are thankful also for the lessons that come through mistakes and misfortune, and are glad that the misfortune is no worse. In fact, gratitude is the best healing agent man can employ and we are thankful for everything.

The patients of Riverview Sanatorium."
